Diversity the norm for those on local boards

by NANCY GOTLER

The subjects with which they concern themselves are as varied as their motivations and levels of dedication.

But the approximately 150 Arlington Heights residents who are members of 26 village commissions and boards have something in common — the power to make decisions that affect the lives of their 71,000 neighbors.

Most are volunteers who serve without pay; others are appointed and receive token amounts ranging from $15 to $25 per meeting.

They sacrifice free time with family and friends, and many spend their own money on the job out of a sense of duty. Some are more interested in having a title before their names or have higher political ambitions.

Whatever their reasons for participating, the village could not run efficiently without them. They control everything from zoning and building codes to water supplies and parks.

And despite cries of growing public apathy by some residents, the number of participants in village government increased more than 50 per cent during the past year.

Five veteran volunteers, representative of the dozens of others like them, have shared with The Herald their views of the reasons and rewards of active citizenship.

Cawley

Martin E. Cawley is pessimistic and hopeful about the future of Arlington Heights.

"I think the village is heading toward big-city politics," he said "There's been a political split on the board recently, but people chose to move to this village for reasons other than political bickering.

"I'm just afraid that by the time people wake up to what's going on, the damage will already have been done."

CAWLEY, AN ACTIVE member of

Muller

"People have got to start taking citizenship seriously," Kay Muller admonishes, "and put in as much time being a good citizen as they do playing tennis or bridge."

Mrs. Muller, a mother of four, is a former member of the park board and plan commission, a 12-year participant in the League of Women Voters. She led the Caucus campaign in the last village election.

She teaches at a learning center in Dryden School, is on a legal services advisory board at Harper College and Killer caused illness?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A confidential congressional report says the mysterious "Legionnaires Disease" that killed 29 persons may have been induced by a crazed murderer using a lethal gas concoction.

But the report and its mad chemist theory drew quick fire Friday from a scientist cited as one of its sources, and from the National Center for Disease Control, which ran the inconclusive federal investigation of Legionnaires Disease.

The House subcommittee staff report called the investigative efforts conducted by the CDC and by Pennsylvania health officials "a fiasco" that followed blind leads and spoiled medical evidence.

"IT IS NOT inconceivable that a demented veteran or a paranoid anti-military type could have committed an act of murder in Philadelphia's Bellevue Stratford Hotel," Rep. John Murphy, D-N. Y., wrote in the report to other members of his consumer protection subcommittee.

The report quotes the University of Connecticut's Dr. William Sunderman, an expert on nickel poisoning, as saying residues found in the victims suggest they could have succumbed to a tasteless, odorless gas made of dry ice and nickel carbonyl, and let loose in the air ducts of the American Legion's convention center hotel.

Sunderman, after reading a syndicated columnist's account of his alleged conclusions, said that news report "dramatizes and oversimplifies completely and distorts my statements . . .

"WE DID FIND increased concentrations of nickel in the lung tissues of five of the six Legionnaires that were sent to us for examination, but we also found increased concentrations in some of the control specimens that were sent to us.

"Hence, we were unable to reach any conclusions regarding the pos-

Pre-election day flurry not the same: Walker

by TONI GINNETTI

It could have been different.

The setting was right for it, the dedication of a major governmental project years in the making, the golden chance for a politician to boast of a promise fulfilled in the final days of a campaign.

But the script had been written in March, and for Daniel Walker there could be no climax here, only ceremonial words in the closing act as the curtain descends on his play.

The governor wore no campaign buttons, although some of those who joined him at the dedication Thursday of the Busse Woods reservoir in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve in Elk Grove Township adorned their lapels with the signs of the time.

AND ALTHOUGH there was pride in his tone as he spoke to the several dozen assembled dignitaries about the completion of the $21.9 million reservoir flood-control project, there was no partisan swaggering.

For these are not days of self-vaunting for Walker. He is not the incumbent seeking reelection, a position decided by fate rather than choice.

There could be handshakes with a woman and her young son, there could be photos of the uncloaked, jovial governor brushing aside his wind-tossed hair and closing the gate of the main dam to begin operation of the reservoir.

Gov. Daniel Walker

But they would win no votes for him next Tuesday, and when Daniel Walker addressed the dedication and later the children at Rupley School in Elk Grove Village and the Elk Grove Rotarians, the tones were those of an outgoing statesman, not a stumping candidate.

There was polite fanfare when the governor's blue Chevrolet pulled up to the reservoir site. And there were embellishments from State Rep. William Redmond; Tom Hamilton, chairman of the Upper Salt Creek Steering Committee; and Arthur Janura, general superintendent of the Cook County Forest Preserve Dist., all who pointed to Walker as the decisive force behind completion of the reservoir project.

BUT WALKER, while admitting a

Heads turn as passers-by view action at drive-in

by PAUL GORES

Brake lights flashed and drivers on Rand Road turned their heads as an actress removed her blouse on screen No. 1 of the Rte. 53 Outdoor Theater in Palatine Township.

A few drivers pulled over Wednesday night to watch as soon as they got through the Rand and Hicks roads intersection. One even made a U-turn at the intersection so he could get another look.

Less visible than the action on screen No. 1, the semi-clad bodies of the "Delinquent Schoolgirls" could be seen by drivers traveling southeast on Rand Road. And for drivers with keen eyesight, the antics of "The Dirtiest Girl I Ever Met" were displayed on screen No. 3.

NONE OF THE movies shown Wednesday is X-rated — the management claims it doesn't show X-rated films anymore. But controversy about the theater's choice of films continues, and it may eventally be resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Illinois Appellate Court will decide within the next two months whether a Cook County Circuit Court order banning X-rated films at the theater is constitutional. The injunction was issued by Judge Francis T. Delaney Nov. 21 following charges by the Cook County state's attorney's office that the theater was a public nuisance.

Jeffery Kohlberg, co-owner of Kohlberg Theaters Inc. and the Rte. 53 Outdoor Theater, pleaded guilty to a contempt charge when the drive-in showed a movie in December which contained some sexually explicit Rand, Hicks— X-rated corner?

A smut strip is forming on Rand Road near the Hicks Road intersection in Palatine Township, and there's probably nothing the township can do about it.

A new go-go bar called "The Torch Club," an adult bookstore and the Rte. 53 Outdoor Theater, which shows many sex-oriented films, all are located within a block of each other on Rand Road.

"That whole area is becoming sort of a seedy strip," said Richard Cow-

The issue in Rockford is spelled J-O-B-S

ROCKFORD, Ill. — A lot of people are looking at the 1976 election campaign from the end of a very long line, the unemployment line.

"Jobs and employment are the issues — to get this country rolling again. That's it as far as I'm concerned," says Charles Layne, one of some 11,000 people in Rockford who are looking for work and cannot find it.

Layne says he plans to vote for Carter. "He's a good man, a religious man," he says. "Carter understands that the big shots steal and go free while the little guys steal and go to the penitentiary."

David Wahl, 24 and currently unemployed, says the government should subsidize jobs for the people willing and wanting to work. "I'll take anything I can get," he says.

Wahl says he does not particularly like either Ford or Carter, but since he has to make a choice he plans to vote for Carter. "The Democratic party has done a little more for the average American," he says.

Don Williams has lived in Rockford for all of his 23 years but for the last seven months has been unable to find work. Jobs is the main issue for him. "I don't think Ford has been doing his job," he says.

"I've been in and out of town looking for work. I'll search around here maybe a couple more months then I'll have to leave for some place else, maybe Texas," he says.

For Carol Griffin, an unemployed restaurant manager, the jobs issue means a good job. "I don't mean these flaky jobs," she says.

"I'm leaning toward Ford," she says. "Carter kind of scares me. I don't know why, but every time I hear him I get a funny feeling. Do you know what I mean?"

ILLINOIS ISSUES: Northern Illinois is a microcosm of the state as a whole. Herald metropolitan staff writer Kurt Baer and photographer Jim Frost criss-crossed 9,000 square miles of territory from Galena to DeKalb, Rockford to the Quad Cities. The opinions they encountered are as varied as the roads they traveled.

Unemployment is the overriding issue in this city of 150,000 people, the second largest city in Illinois. The jobless rate in Rockford runs between 9 and 10 per cent, 2 to 3 per cent higher than the statewide average. But not everyone holds Ford responsible.

Gail Pearson, 63, was forced to retire in 1974, "when things first started slipping around here," he says. Today he is comfortably retired and working as a part-time delivery man.

"I'm voting for Ford all the way. Thompson too. I'm a straight Republican man," Pearson says with a pre-Watergate kind of party pride.

"Ford has done a good job. He went in there in one hell of a tough spot. The economy was down to rock bottom and Watergate was all over him. He had to overcome a lot of obstacles," he says.

Regardless of the party it is important that every eligible American vote, Pearson says. "The vote is the only darn thing you can do in this country anymore that's free."

911 TV ads raise havoc in suburbs

The Northwest Municipal Conference says television commercials advertising Chicago's new 911 emergency telephone number are "playing havoc in the suburbs." William Mulenfeld, conference director, said "a serious condition exits because some Northwest suburb residents believe the 911 number is in effect for their area. Mount Prospect fire prevention officials said that recently a local businessman dialed 911 when a small fire broke out. The man received a 10-second recorded message telling him 911 is not in operation for the immediate area. "When you're dealing with a fire situation, even seconds count," said Lonnie Jackson, Mount Prospect public education officer. Other Northwest suburban fire and police departments, however, told The Herald they were unaware people are confused about the 911 number.

Buy land for parking: officials

The purchase of three privately owned parcels near the Oakton Street business district in Des Plaines for use as municipal parking lots has been recommended by city officials. The plan, prepared by the city's department of planning and zoning, has been proposed as a solution to traffic congestion on Oakton Street between River Road and the Soo Line R.R. tracks. Under the plan, parking would be banned along Oakton Street enabling twice as much traffic to be accommodated. Cost of the property is estimated at $305,000.

Break-in at CCPA offices

Burglars broke into the offices of the Combined Counties Police Assn., at 212 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling, early Wednesday, but took nothing, a CCPA officer said, Thursday. Saying the break-in was "strange," the officer could give no reason for the burglary of the headquarters of the police officers' collective bargaining agent.

1972 pledge to have the reservoir project completed in his term, would relinquish the laurels, calling the project "the result of the political process of government listening to the basic needs and demands of the people and acting decisively to meet those needs."

During a special stop at Rupley School where he fielded questions from kindergarten through fifth graders sitting on the gymnasium floor, Walker would say he still gets "butterflies in my tummy" during each major address, that his proudest accomplishment had been avoiding a state income tax increase and that there are times he "doesn't like being governor."

He could be candid with a question on whether he has ever thought of running for President ("Yes, I did think once about being President,") and one on what he was going to do "when you're done being governor," ("I'm going to go back to the private practice of law and then I may or may not decide to run for office again.")

And with the Rotarians he could joke about a telegram he sent to both gubernatorial candidates, Michael J. Howlett and James R. Thompson, "asking if one of them will stand in for me for two years."

HE COULD REPEAT a familiar theme of independence and of how, after four years in government, he was "still kind of an outsider looking in."

"I have tried to change the political system in this state and there is no way you can do that without causing confrontation," he told them. "But if you do not stand up for what you believe in in the game of politics, you'll just be one of the go-along guys."

He would stop for a moment before leaving the Maitre d' restaurant to pose for a picture with a young girl who approached hesitatingly, and to shake the hand of a hostess who failed to restrain an impulsive "there's the governor."

THERE WOULD BE campaigning on behalf of others on this day and the four days remaining before voters take the stage from candidates.

But pitching for others isn't quite the same.

"Naturally the adrenelin flows a little tougher when you're campaigning for yourself," Daniel Walker admitted. "I'm campaigning for other candidates that I think should stay in office and I hope that I can help them."

But it is so different now, governor.

"It sure is."

sible role of nickel exposure as a causitive factor in the Legionnaire's Disease."

In Atlanta, CDC officials denied Murphy's charges that their investigation dwelt too long on the possibility the Legionnaires Disease might have been swine flu, and that they ruined tissue specimens so that toxic poisons could not be identified.

A CDC official said the federal investigators began to turn away from the swine flu theory on the first day of their investigation, and took steps from the outset to handle all tissue properly.

UPI OBTAINED A copy of the secret House subcommittee report. It is based upon the preliminary work of investigators preparing for the panel's own hearings into the causes of the Legionnaires Disease.

Some 180 persons contracted the same puzzling illness at the legion convention in the Philadelphia hotel July 21 through 24. Twenty-nine died of the disease, which was symptomized by chest pains and fever.

In a futile effort to identify the cause of the ailment, federal, state and local health officials pursued a number of theories including the possibility — later rejected — that the victims died of swine flu.

"THIS COMMENCED what can only be described as a fiasco that has become the new 'Philadelphia Story,' " Murphy said in the report.

He said the investigative effort run by the federal Center for Disease Control resulted in "an exercise in futility."

Murphy reported that independent scientists such as Dr. William F. Sunderman of the University of Connecticut, an expert in nickel poisoning, suggested early on that the symptoms resembled toxic poisoning and noted that nickel carbonl had been found in the tissue of the victims.

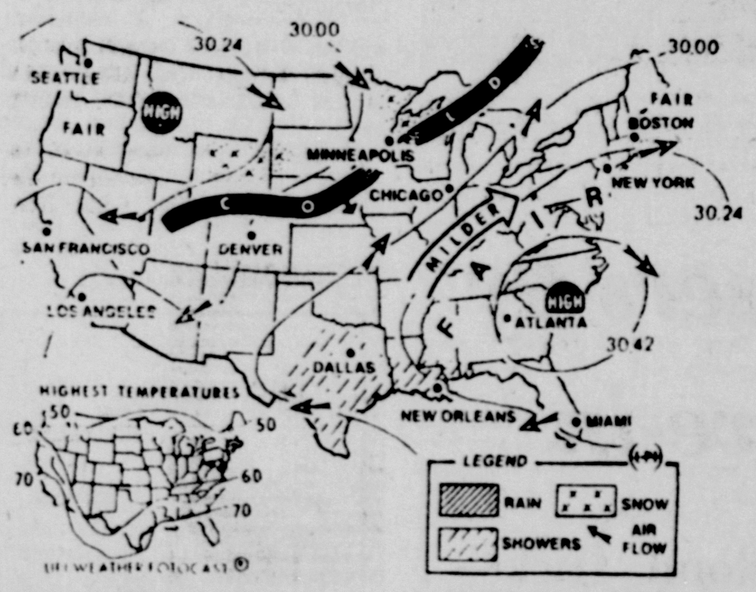

Murphy conceded that a number of "kooks and crackpots" had suggested exotic theories as to what caused the disease.

BUT HE SAID Sunderman had received "an anonymous and omnious sounding letter" on July 28, which refered to "substances containing nickel carbonyl and discussed the murder and killing of authority and military type figures.

"Dr. Sunderman believes that nickel carbonyl could have been introduced into the hotel where delegates were meeting by combining the gas with (frozen) carbon dioxide — dry ice — allowing it to naturally boil off, leaving no residual except that found in the tissues of the victims of the killer."

Murphy said his panel will hold hearings in Philadelphia on the matter. But he said since the federal inquiry proceeded on the theory that a virus was involved, much important evidence is no longer available and the "the cause of Legionnaires Disease may never be found."

Ford, Carter campaigns focus on taxes

by United Press International

President Ford pledged Thursday to give a new tax cut top priority if he wins the election. Jimmy Carter, although predicting his economic projections would lead to lower taxes, said "I'm very careful about what I promise."

Campaigning in the heavily populated industrial Midwest five days before the election, the two candidates zeroed in on taxes as the dominant campaign issue and quarreled at long range over whether Carter's nationwide lead was slipping.

Opening a day's campaign in Indianapolis, before moving into Ohio, Ford told local business and civil leaders that "tax cuts are the No. 1 priority in the next Ford administration" and said Carter has "an obligation to say where he stands on a tax cut."

Ford called Congress stupid for not approving an additional $10 billion tax cut he proposed early this year.

Carter, campaigning before enthusiastic audiences in Pittsburgh, Erie, Pa., and Cleveland before flying to Booklyn, said a tax cut and new government programs could be achieved by reducing unemployment and inflation.

Although Carter said Wednesday that tax cuts were "inevitable," the Georgian was more cautious in Cleveland where he told a crowd of about 20,000 that "I'm very careful about what I promise."

Carter said if the country can achieve a 5-6 per cent economic growth, cut unemployment to 1968 levels, bring inflation under control and achieve a normal relationship between government spending and normal spending "we can realize enough income to have a combination of new programs and to have some tax cuts."

"Now, I'm very careful not to promise that for sure," Carter said. "But if our projections are right, if we just work together and just have normal economic circumstances we can realize a better life for our people."

A new Harris poll released Thursday showed that of 1,893 registered voters who previously voted regularly, only 81% are "certain" they will vote in next week's presidential election. The Harris organization said Carter had the most to lose by a low turnout.

Supported by new-found optimism among top aides that the tide has turned in his favor, Ford said Carter has suffered a "drastic slippage" in the polls because he backed Democratic spending proposals.

He claimed Carter supports economic "policies of panic" that call for curing inflation and unemployment by "bigger and bigger government spending."

Aboard Air Force One, heading from Indiana to Ohio, White House chief of staff Richard Cheney said Ford has put together a combination that will bring him victory Tuesday.

Cheney claimed Ford has cracked Carter's once-solid southern base, is holding the traditional Republican mountain and plains states and runnng neck-and-neck in the big eight industrial states.

"We are sure of getting the requisite number 270-plus electoral votes but exactly how many more, I don't know," Cheney said.

Carter, asked in Erie whether he was losing ground in the final stage of his 22-month campaign for the White House, snapped "I'm not."

But he told a rally of about 7,500 in Perry Square "there are a long, tough five days ahead" and that it would be a mistake to take anything for granted.

In Cleveland, Carter told an enthusiastic crowd that "every vote counts. We are ahead in the polls but we could still lose an election."

Ford asks moratorium on nuclear reprocessing gear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford asked the world's nuclear nations Thursday to declare a three-year moratorium on the export of reprocessing equipment that can be used to change uranium and spent atomic fuel into nuclear weapons.

In a major reversal of domestic policy, Ford also halted U.S. plans for the commercial reprocessing of spent reactor fuel to extract uranium and plutonium and turn it back into fuel. He said no such recycling will take place until international plutonium safeguards are perfected.

Ford's action left open the possibility, however, that a federal demonstration program of commercial reprocessing techniques might be carried out to show one way of stretching uranium supplies. It had no effect on federal reprocessing to produce plutonium for weapons.

Ford has been criticized by Jimmy Carter for not moving energetically enough to control the proliferation of nuclear technology and with it the ability for other nations to build atomic weapons.

Administration officials said there was no connection between the announcement of the new program, which follows two years of preparations, and the upcoming election.

The President said the world's nuclear suppliers — the United States, the Soviet Union, Canada, West Germany and France — are obliged to make sure that other nations have reliable supplies of fuel for peaceful purposes such as production of electricity. He called for stepped up U.S. fuel production.

Warning that nuclear suppliers also have a responsibility to stop atomic weapons proliferation, Ford said the United States will at the minimum cut off its nuclear cooperation with any nation that violates safeguards agreements.

Undersecretary of State Charles Robinson said the United States was encouraged by preliminary consultations with foreign governments on the new nonproliferation proposal. He said the Soviet Union had indicated its support, although no government had given a firm response.

Ehrlichman begins jail sentence

SAFFORD, Ariz. (UPI) — Nixon White House aide John Ehrlichman entered a minimum security federal prison at his own request Thursday to begin a 2½ to 8-year sentence for Watergate crimes.

Ehrlichman, convicted in two unrelated Watergate trials, became the first of three major Watergate coverup defendants to begin serving terms for conspiracy, obstruction of justice and lying to a grand jury.

John Hadden, superintendent of the federal prison work camp in Safford, said the bearded former domestic counsel to President Richard Nixon surrendered at 10:30 a.m. local time — shortly after two federal judges in Washington approved his request to start serving sentences meted out at a pair of trials that took place in 1974.

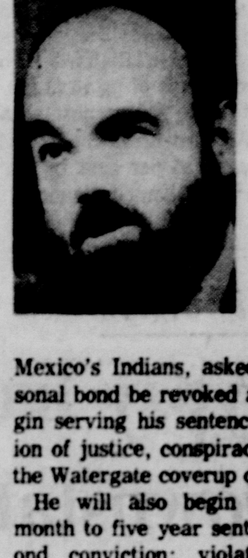

Ehrlichman has been free on personal bond, pending appeals. Hadden said the prisoner requested no news coverage of his entry into the remote federal facility, a minimum security camp with about 350 inmates. Most of them are illegal aliens.

In Washington, Ehrlichman lawyer Stuart Stiller declined to explain why his client had asked that his personal bond be revoked so that he could enter prison.

Stiller said, however, that Ehrlichman would still press his appeals of the Watergate convictions to the Supreme Court.

His request for an order sending him to prison, which Stiller said was made Thursday morning, does not affect co-defendants H. R. Haldeman and former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, both of whom remain free pending further order of the district court.

Ehrlichman, who once asked to atone for his role in covering up the Watergate break-in by aiding New Mexico's Indians, asked that his personal bond be revoked and that he begin serving his sentence for obstruction of justice, conspiracy and lying in the Watergate coverup case.

John Ehrlichman

He will also begin serving a 20-month to five year sentence on a second conviction: violating the civil rights of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, by ordering the "White House Plumbers" to break into the psychiatrist's office in search of information on Ellsberg — the man who leaked the Pentagon Papers to the press.

Thursday's imprisonment order, issued jointly by Watergate trial Judge John J. Sirica and Gerhard Gesell, the judge in the Ellsberg break-in case, gave no reason for Ehrlichman's voluntary surrender of freedom.

Czech jet hijacked; defector surrenders

A 26-year-old Czech railway worker who wanted to escape to the West hijacked a Czech airliner late Thursday and forced the pilot at gunpoint to fly to West Germany. The jetliner carried 105 passengers and a crew of eight on the domestic flight. On landing in Munich, the hijacker released the passenger's and crew and surrendered. He was taken into custody. A Bavarian police official said "He did it just to get out of Czechoslovakia."

Rhodesian conference delayed 2 hours

A U.S.-arranged conference to negotiate the transition of power in Rhodesia from whites to blacks opened more than two hours late in Geneva Thursday with blacks refusing to attend until they received a reply to demands from Premier Ian Smith. Once begun, the opening session lasted only 22 minutes, in which the five delegations — one white and four black — stared at each other in stony silence while British chairman Ivor Richard read a statement.

The conference, to negotiate an end to white minority rule in the renegade former British colony and arranged by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger during his African shuttle in September, then adjourned until Friday. In Washington, U.S. officials said Kissinger would send a reinforced delegation to attend the conference next week.

Powerful bomb rocks Interpole in Paris

A powerful bomb exploded at the Paris headquarters of the International Police Organization Thursday in an attack apparently staged by former Spanish political prisoners to protest the visit of King Juan Carlos. The early morning blast shattered the entrance hall and caused "very heavy" damage to several offices but no casualties, police said. A telephone caller who said he represented "a group of Spanish ex-prisoners" told the Paris daily France Soir "Interpol must pay because of the support it gives to the Spanish government in the repression of opponents of the regime." Despite the explosion, Juan Carlos and his wife, Queen Sophia, went ahead with activities.

Single consumer protection unit urged

A congressional subcommittee Thursday recommended creation of a single federal agency to protect consumer interests, which it said have fallen victim to overlapping functions and political pressure. Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., chairman of the oversight panel which has delved extensively into the workings of the regulatory bureaucracy, said: "The conclusions reject the notion that the agencies themselves, as presently constituted, can be counted on to represent the broad interest of the general public, particularly consumers."

A section of the subcommittee's report recommended setting up a "consumer safety and health commission" to take over and coordinate functions of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the Food and Drug Administration and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Weaker cigarets recommended by group

A National Cancer Institute official Thursday recommended mass production of weaker cigarets as the best way to save incorrigible smokers from lung disease. Deputy Director Gio Gori of the NCI's Cancer Cause and Prevention division said the technology is available for reducing the hazardous components of cigaret smoke and the tobacco industry is starting to use it. By contrast, Gori said, the abolition of smoking is unrealistic and impractical. "Therefore, it is important that we protect those people who continue to smoke despite all warnings," he said in a paper delivered at a National Academy of Sciences Symposium.

Human transmission 'serious'

No serum for fatal virus

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — A bleeding fever that has killed 335 people in Africa is the most dangerous virus discovered in the world in more than a quarter-century, immunologists said Thursday.

No serum for the fatal virus exists, and the epidemic has not spread more widely only because "infected persons simply died before they could communicate it over a wider distance," said Dr. Maurice Kivits, a Belgian specialist.

Doctors working with the Belgian Medical Cooperation Mission to Zaire said the capacity of the virus "for interhuman transmission is extremely serious."

"It poses the gravest danger due to a virus disease encountered in public health care in more than 25 years," their statement said.

The statement was approved by American, French and Belgian scientists who have been leading the fight against the mystery disease in Kinshasa.

The epidemic has killed 270 persons in Zaire and 65 in the Sudan. Another 125 people who may have been exposed to the virus have been kept under quarantine at a hospital in Kinshasa.

The physicians, experts in contagious diseases, said the virus closely resembles a fever transmitted by green monkeys that killed seven West German medical workers at Marburg University in 1967. The serum developed to combat that virus has failed to block the new outbreak, however.

The bleeding fever causes lesions of capillary blood vessels and saps coagulating matter from the blood, causing lethal hemorrhaging.

Kivits and Dr. Jan Burke, chiefs of the Belgian medical team based in Kinshasa, said work was continuing to develop serum.

"We hope that work on blood samples of persons who recovered from the disease will soon lead to an identification of antibodies and allow production of an effective serum," Burke said.

Liquor bottle found in ferry wheelhouse

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Coast Guard investigators said Thursday a nearly empty half-pint liquor bottle was recovered from the wheelhouse of a ferryboat that was rammed and capsized last week, killing 78 persons.

The discovery came just 24 hours after a coroner's report showed the captain of the ferryboat George Prince had been drinking and would have been declared legally drunk in most states when his vessel was rammed broadside by a 664-foot Norwegian tanker.

"This bottle was a half-pint bottle of Seagram's V.O. containing about one inch of liquid," said Cmdr. Peter Lauridsen, a member of the official Coast Guard Board of Inquiry.

"This piece of evidence has been transmitted to the FBI for tests to determine its content and to see if there were any fingerprints on the bottle."

Only 18 persons survived the Oct. 20 collision near Destrehan, La., 30 miles upriver from New Orleans. Seventy-two bodies had been recovered by late Thursday and another six corpses were believed missing.

Earlier Thursday, a diver who spent five days pulling bodies from the Mississippi River testified most of the victims of the collision never had a chance to escape.

Cold weather during the predawn hours had kept most passengers on the ferryboat inside their cars, trapping them when the 120-foot vessel sank in 75 feet of water.

"Most of the vehicles went straight down," said diver Fred Hunt. "All of them had one or two windshields broken in and they were upside down."

Dr. Frank Minyard, Orleans Parish coroner, reported Wednesday ferryboat Capt. Eugene Auletta had nearly enough alcohol in his blood to be legally drunk at the time of the collision. "He definitely had to have been drinking while working."

After discovery of the liquor bottle was revealed, an attorney for the state cautioned investigators not to jump to conclusions. "We want to be very, very careful to protect his (Auletta's) right to the full extent of the law with regard to protection of this man and his widow," said Henry Reid.

Escape artist breaks Houdini record

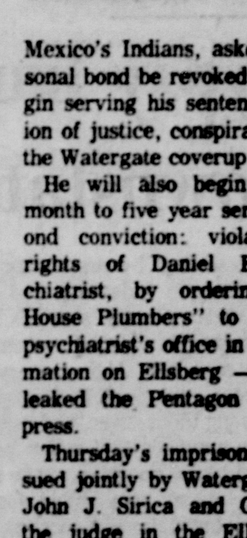

People

• Want to learn how to break out of a strait jacket and win immortality? Or to impress friends? Or because it might be a handy thing to know? It's simple, says Mario Manzini, a professional escape artist — all you have to do is dislocate your shoulder and have a high threshold of pain. Manzini performed the feat in exactly 60 seconds Thursday in an Empire State Building elevator which descended non-stop from the 80th floor to the lobby. According to Manzini, he broke a record for a similar feat set in 1912 by his idol, Harry Houdini, who needed 1 minute and 25 seconds. The Guiness Book of Records will officially list Manzini as record-holder for breaking out of a straight jacket and handcuffs in an elevator.

• Kenneth Guenther of Black River Falls, Wis., has been picked to present the nation's Christmas tree to President Ford this year. The 18 to 20-foot tree will be delivered to the White House in early December. Guenther was recently named national grand champion Christmas tree grower for 1976.

• Comedienne Totie Fields, who lost 64 pounds following the amputation of a leg, plans to resume her stage career in Las Vegas next April. "People love me for my jokes and humor, not for my fat," Miss Fields, now a svelt 117 pounds, said in announcing her plans.

C&NW fare hike delayed a month

The Illinois Commerce Commission said Thursday it will delay ruling on a requested 15 per cent fare hike for the Chicago and North Western Ry. until the end of November. The railroad requested the delay because of progress in negotiations with the Regional Transportation Authority for purchase of C&NW service.

By law, the ICC would have been required to rule on the 20-to 25-cent increase by today, but the right to an immediate ruling was waived because of the recent RTA offer. On Oct. 12 the RTA offered to pay the North Western more than $29 million over the next four years for its commuter service. No date has been set for further C&NW-RTA talks, but discussions are expected Nov. 15.

Man charged in O'Hare murder

A man found innocent of a 1972 murder by reason of insanity was charged with another murder Thursday in the beating of an O'Hare Airport security guard. James J. O'Malley, 55, a former amateur boxing champion, was arrested shortly after witnesses, using citizens' band radios, called police to a guard shack on Lawrence Avenue near Mannheim Road Wednesday night.

The victim, Samuel Valenti, 67, a retired Chicago policeman, was found with "his whole face smashed in," homicide Sgt. Rocco Rinaldi said. Police said Valenti appeared to have been punched, kicked and stomped.

O'Malley, a former Golden Gloves and National Amateur Athletic Assn. welterweight boxing champion, was charged with the New Year's Day, 1972, murder of a Chicago man. John Jameson, shot to death in a West Side pizzeria as he sat with his 6-year-old daughter. O'Malley's trial was delayed because of his mental condition. He finally was brought to trial this year. criminal Court Judge Philip Romiti found him innocent by reason of insanity and turned him over to the Dept. of Mental Health.

Romiti said Thursday he was "angry, frustrated and disturbed" that O'Malley had been released.

Nurses threaten hospital strike

About 1,000 registered nurses at Cook County and Oak Forest hospitals will go on strike Wednesday unless a new agreement is reached by then, the nurses union announced Thursday. The nurses voted by a 9-1 margin to terminate their agreement Wednesday, freeing them for strike action. The vote came after negotiators failed to reach a new agreement. The nurses, affiliated with the Illinois Nurses Assn., are fighting a proposal to take away sick pay on the first day of illness and also want more than the 2.9 per cent pay hike that has been offered them.

Escaped rapist in Morton Grove

A convicted rapist escaped from Stateville Penitentiary near Joliet Thursday, kidnaped a man and his 16-month-old son, forced them to drive him to Morton Grove, then fled, Crest Hill Police Chief Dennis Jaskoviak said. Neither the kidnaped man nor his son was harmed, but the escaped man remained at large. "He is being sought now in the Morton Grove area on two charges of aggravated kidnaping as well as the escape charge," Jaskoviak said. He identified the prisoner as Walter McCottrell, 27, East St. Louis, who was serving time for rape and armed robbery.

County road worker fired

A Cook County Highway Dept. foreman was fired and dismissal proceedings began against a highway engineer Thursday for operating a private toy business at a county paint shop. Fired was laborer foreman Vito Scoleri, while engineer Lawrence Mariotti was suspended pending dismissal. The action came after an unidentified county employe described the operation in a letter sent to county officials. The toy business was operated out of the paint shop at 26th Street and Beach Avenue near LaGrange Park. Dunne said other possible misdeeds by highway department employes were being investigated. However, he declined to release any details.

Elrod supports vandalism law

A proposed county ordinance that would force parents to pay for their children's vandalism was strongly supported Thursday by Cook County Sheriff Richard Elrod. The proposed ordinance also would impose fines of up to $1,000. Elrod said vandalism increased 25 per cent in the unincorporated area of Cook County between 1973 and 1975. Richard Brandt, police chief of Deerfield, said vandalism has decreased 36 per cent in the 10 months since the community has had a vandalism ordinance.

Gypsy band robs Downstate shops

A band described by merchants as "gypsies" has stolen $3,450 from businesses in Galesburg and Altona, according to Galesburg police and Knox County sheriff's deputies. Police said about 15 women "dressed in colorful costumes and speaking a foreign language" entered the Aldi grocery store in Galesburg Oct. 16, caused "great confusion" by confronting customers and employes, fighting among themselves, and asking questions.

The store manager told police he later missed $3,000 in receipts which he had been counting at the time of the disturbance. He said he left the money unattended for about 15 minutes during the disturbance, but delayed reporting the loss because he thought it might have been an internal store problem. On Oct. 23 the band got another $450 using a similar technique at the Haig Shopping Center in Altona.

Percy to Carter: name cabinet

Sen. Charles Percy, campaigning for President Ford at Western Illinois University Thursday in Macomb, called on Jimmy Carter to give voters a better indication of whom he would name to his cabinet if elected. While Ford has made some "outstanding" appointments, Percy said, "We haven't the slightest idea who would be in the cabinet on the other side. All we know is the press secretary for Carter has said that most of them will be people that we never heard of before. Where are they going to come from? Can't he . . . possibly name some of the people?" Percy asked.

Prosecution reform urged

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott Thursday said a proposed model law to reform prosecution of statewide and interstate financial crimes — particularly Medicaid frauds — will be recommended to the National Assn. of Attorney Generals before year's end. Scott told a news conference the proposed law would be based on experiences gained from a joint effort by northern Illinois and northern Indiana in investigating Medicaid frauds.

U.S. campaign law reduces bumper sticker politicking

Don't try measuring the support for President Ford in the Northwest suburbs by the number of bumper stickers with his name on them.

There just aren't that many around.

Suburban township Republican organizations have found themselves short, at least compared to previous years, of such traditional political paraphernalia as bumper stickers, buttons and campaign literature.

The reason, Ford supporters say, is the new federal law limiting presidential campaign expenditures.

Harold Smith Jr., Barrington Township committeeman and an official of the President Ford Committee in Illinois, said Ford and running mate Robert Dole are mentioned in literature being distributed by the state and county party organizations, but "Ford literature specifically is very limited."

Smith said, "There are also fewer bumper stickers and buttons. It was a basic decision made to plan on a media campaign, rather than on campaign paraphernalia."

CARL HANSEN, Elk Grove Township Republican committeeman and head of the Cook County Suburban Republican Committeeman's Organization, said his organization received "about 10 per cent of what we needed" in Ford literature to be distributed to precincts.

"I've never seen a situation like this with literature for a presidential campaign," Hansen said. "We have to try to offset some of that as an organization."

Hansen said he managed to increase the amount of Ford literature available to his precinct captains by "scrounging."

Smith said any further efforts by local organizations to get more literature from Ford headquarters will be in vain, however. He said, "All the material has been given out for distribution. There isn't any more."

Religious Yule songs may gain OK in Dist. 21

Children in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 may be singing Christmas carols of a religious nature this year, but there will have to be cultural and historical reason for using them.

This requirement is outlined in a new policy on holiday programs proposed Thursday by the Dist. 21 administration at a board of education meeting.

The proposed policy, which will be voted on at the board's Nov. 11 meeting, states that all school-sponsored activities must have a secular purpose and be nonsectarian.

ANY ACTIVITIES which include religious subject matter must be used in the teaching of a secular subject, the policy says.

About 15 parents attended Thursday's meeting to protest a policy suggested to the board two weeks ago. The first proposal, rescinded by the board Thursday, said holiday activities, programs and decorations may be seasonal, but may not be of a religious nature.

A Buffalo Grove parent, who asked not to be identified, said she objected to the first recommendation because "is was strictly seasonal and eliminated religion."

"ALL YOU CAN have is the snow," another parent said of the rescinded policy.

A group of students from Holmes Junior High School, Wheeling, opposed the first proposal. "We think it is unfair for a small number of complainers to determine what songs we can and cannot sing," Mary Blondell, a Holmes student, said.

Janet Flapan, a parent from Arlington Heights, however, said she preferred the original proposal which would have required seasonal songs and art work rather than those with a religious theme.

Mrs. Flapan said several Supreme Court decisions "point to the idea that the state must not advocate any religion, but stay strictly neutral."

SUPT. KENNETH GILL said the first proposal was not satisfactory because it "took everything out." He said, however, any material with overt religious content will have to be examined to make sure there is a secular reason for using it.

"We have to make sure we don't push anything for indoctrination or conversion to a religion," Gill said.

Gill said the district's schools should try to select songs for holiday activities with neutral nature, and which will not offend any child.

"There is enough of a variety of music so we can find music that takes care of different cultures without impinging on anyone," Gill said.

scenes.

Kohlberg was fined $1,000 for contempt of court. Charges against his father, Stanford, who also is part-owner of Kohlberg Theaters Inc., were dropped.

THE KOHLBERGS' attorney, Patrick Tuite, filed an appeal of the injunction claiming it was prior restraint and therefore unconstitutional. On Oct. 14, Tuite and Assistant State's Atty. John Dienner argued the case before the appellate court.

"Ultimately it will be before the U.S. Supreme Court," Dienner said. "There are no other cases like this one in the county right now."

Dienner said he expects Tuite to appeal the decision if the Illinois Appellate Court upholds the ban on X-rated movies. Tuite would not confirm what action he would take if the decision is upheld.

"I don't talk about losing," Tuite said.

The Kohlbergs built two more screens after the injunction was issued so they could continue showing sexually explicit movies. The screens are more difficult to see from Rand or Hicks roads than the original screen, now called No. 1, which is almost parallel to Rand Road.

SCREEN NO. 2 usually shows the less controversial films, such as monster or adventure movies. But during Wednesday night's showing of "Drum," partially clothed women were shown on the highly visible screen more than once.

"I don't know if they're X-rated, but by some of the titles you'd sure think they were," said Jeff Feil, 21, an employe of H & R Arco, a gas station across from the outdoor theater.

"I've had a couple of people pull into the station and sit on their hoods to watch," Feil said. Feil said the theater "shows the same garbage" night after night.

Steve Theorin, 18, of John's Super Shell Service Station, 2240 N. Rand Rd., said there haven't been any accidnts in ront of the theater for about a year.

Drivers gaping at sexually explicit scenes reportedly caused some accidents before the injunction on X-rated movies was issued last year.

"They used to crowd the restaurant parking lot and line up along the side and sit and watch the movies," Theorin said. "We used to have people asking us to hook up speakers over here."

THEORIN SAID the screen facing Rand Road doesn't "show the real juicy movies anymore."

Jeffery Kohlberg also contends that the movies shown at the Rte. 53 Outdoor aren't as sexually explicit as they used to be.

"Whatever the rest of the drive-ins are playing, we play them too," Kohlberg said. "We don't play anything like that (X-rated films) anymore.

But anyone driving past the Rte. 53 Outdoor Theater Wednesday after 9:30 p.m. could have got an eyeful, X-rated or not.

en, Palatine township attorney. Cowen said the township has no legal means to stop the strip's growth.

LAST JUNE the township board of auditors supported a resolution asking Cook County to prevent the establishment of smut strips in unincorporated areas of the county. Wendell E. Jones, Palatine village president, and James T. Ryan, Arlington Heights village president, drew up the resolution.

Village and township officials feared pressure against sex-oriented businesses in Chicago would drive the businesses into unincorporated areas. That may be what's happening in Palatine Township.

"A lot of people have mentioned to me that that stretch of highway is turning into a skid row with the sort of lounges and things that are going up out there," said Robert Bergman, Palatine highway commissioner.

The newest establishment there, "The Torch Club," boasts of "the utmost in X-rated, exotic, burlesque dance stars." It is almost next door to the Rte. 53 Outdoor Theater.

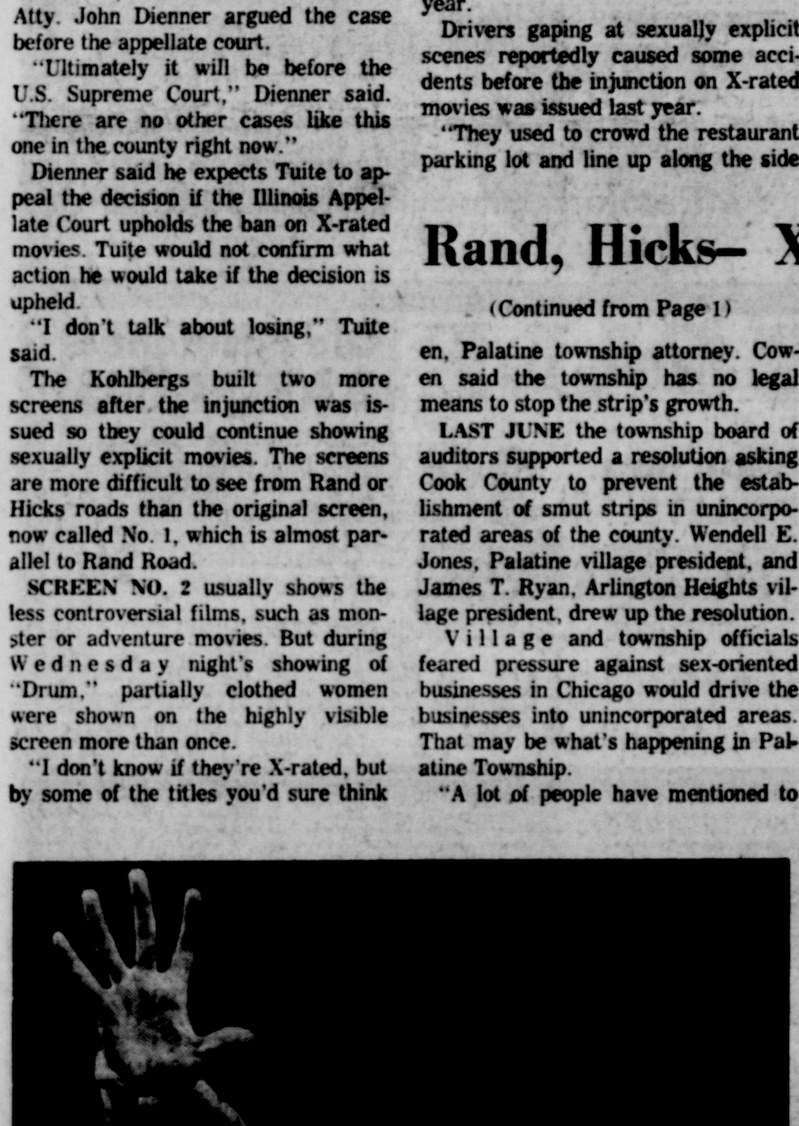

THEATER OWNERS are awaiting an Illinois Appellate Court decision to determine whether a lower court injunction banning X-rated movies at the theater is constitutional. The drive-in still shows many sex-oriented films, although the owners claim none of them is X-rated.

Paul Marcy, secretary of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals, said, "That's (an ordinance zoning sex-oriented businesses) one of the things we missed when we passed our ordinances in January."

Marcy said a public hearing probably would be held in early 1977 to determine how sex-oriented businesses should be zoned in the county. He said such establishments are likely to be zoned to small areas to keep them from spreading.

Betsy Barstead, public information director for the Cook County Sheriff's office, said there have been no complaints about the area so far.

"OBSCENITY LAWS are so liberal it's impossible to get anything on them," she said. But she said the sheriff's department would investigate any complaints about the strip.

IN ROLLING MEADOWS High School's presentation of "The Miracle Worker," a deaf and dumb Helen Keller, played by Maureen Donehey, is helped to overcome her handicaps by teacher Anne Sullivan, played by Mary Monroe. Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. today and Saturday in the school theater, 2901 Central Rd. Tickets are $2, $1.75 and $1.50.

2 townships start program

Swine flu clinics open this weekend for elderly

by KURT BAER

Swine flu vaccination programs in the Northwest suburbs begin in earnest this weekend when two area townships open clinics for senior citizens 60 and older and the chronically ill.

Swine flu immunization clinics for the rest of the public, ages 18 to 60, will not open until the middle of next month.

Palatine and Schaumburg townships both will operate clinics Saturday and Sunday for seniors or persons who have a letter from their doctor verifying that they have a chronic health problem.

SCHAUMBURG TOWNSHIP'S clinic will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at St. Hubert's Catholic Church, 126 Grand Canyon, Hoffman Estates. The Sunday clinic will operate from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Austin Federal Savings and Loan Assn., 72 Weathersfield Commons, Schaumburg.

Palatine Township's clinic will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the Gray M. Sanborn School, 101 N. Oak, Palatine; and at Rolling Meadows High School, 2901 Central Rd., Rolling Meadows.

There is no residency requirement to get a shot at any swine flu clinic because the vaccine is being supplied as part of a $135 million federal program.

TOWNSHIP CLINICS will administer bivalent vaccine which will protect recipients against the swine flu and the Victoria flu that was prevalent last winter.

The rest of the public will receive a monovalent vaccine that will immunize it against the swine flu only.

It takes about two weeks for the body to build up immunity to the flu after receiving the shot. Persons who are allergic to eggs or feathers, have a fever, or who have had some other kind of vaccination within the past two weeks should not get a shot.

MAINE, ELK GROVE and Wheeling townships will conduct vaccination clinics for the elderly and chronically ill next week.

Maine Township. Monday, 4-7 p.m. at Terrace School; Wednesday, 4-7 p.m. at Cumberland School; Thursday, 4-7 p.m. at Forest School; Friday, 4-7 p.m. at Central School, Des Plaines.

Monday and Nov. 12, 1-4 p.m. at the alcoholic treatment center, Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge. Wednesday and Nov. 10, 6:30 - 9:30 p.m. at the alcoholic treatment center, Lutheran General Hospital.

Elk Grove Township. Nov. 6 and 7, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Village Grove Apartments, recreation center, 1130 Cheekwood Ct., Elk Grove Village.

Wheeling Township. Nov. 6 and 7, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., Arlington Heights.

Thompson sees 1 million-vote win

CHICAGO (UPI) — Republican James R. Thompson predicted Thursday he will win the governor's chair by one million votes, but his Democratic opponent, Michael Howlett, pooh poohed that idea and said he will be the victor by 145,000 votes.

With only four days to go before the election, Thompson is running up to 30 points ahead in most polls, and he said if those figures prove true as he expects, he'll win with "a plurality of about a million votes."

Howlett, during television tapings in Chicago, said he thinks he will win by 145,000 votes despite the polls.

"THINGS ARE getting better, he said.

Howlett spent the day campaigning in the Chicago area and continued his attack on Thmpson for "stretching the truth" about how he obtained testimony that helped convict the late Gov. Otto Kerner of bribery.

For the second day in a row, Howlett asked Thompson to prove that he did not help former Illinois "racing queen" Marjorie Lindheimer Everett get a California racing license in return for her testimony against Kerner.

Thompson, who was U.S. attorney and chief prosecutor in the 1972-73 Kerner trial, again denied he had helped Mrs Everett obtain a California license.

And he groused, "They're (the Howlett campaign) trying to divert me from the campaign trail with all this nonsense, and they're succeeding."

Howlett said despite the charges exchanged with Thompson in the general election campaign, and with Gov. Daniel Walker in the gubernatorial primary, he has no hard feelings against either man.

The charges Walker and Thompson leveled at him, Howlett said, "are just charges by a couple of nutty opponents that would do anything to get elected."

But then he added, "We're not gladiators in the ring trying to kill one another. We're still friends. Maybe Jim is thinskinned, I don't know, but I'm the same kind of friend with Walker I was before the primary. I don't harbor resentment. I don't have time for it."

In other political developments Thursday:

• The Peoria Journal-Star said in an editorial Jimmy Carter has better potential for leadership than President Ford. "It is abundantly clear that there is no more room for Ford to grow," the editorial said. "He is as big for the job as he will ever be and he still isn't big enough. . ."

• There were a variety of polls taken. Radio station WQUA in Moline asked 367 persons their presidential preference and found Jimmy Carter leading President Ford 46 per cent to 31 per cent. At Griffin High School in Springfield, Ford got 361 votes to Carter's 228. Students also favored Thompson, William Scott in the attorney general's race and Alan Dixon in the secretary of state contest. Students at Marion High School showed the same preferences as those at Griffin.

James Thompson

Michael Howlett

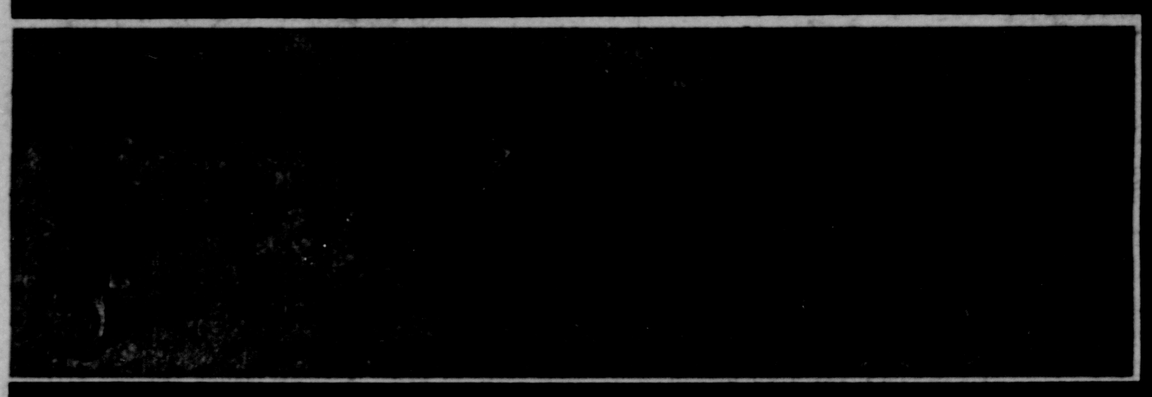

• The Illinois Board of Elections, which is the top dog in Illinois on election day, said it will have more than 100 "election specialists" available Tuesday to respond to complaints and answer questions. The board also said 50,000 people will be "on guard throughout the state" to watch for irregularities.

• The Howlett campaign said their man has been endorsed by 234 mayors and village board presidents in the Cook County suburbs.

• Reps. Abner Mikva of the 10th District and Martin Russo of the 3rd said the National Rifle Assn. is putting on a last-minute effort to defeat them because both congressmen support strong federal handgun control. Both Mikva and Russo are in tight races for reelection.

Northern Illinois: Where it all comes

In a landscape of farms, factories, universities and employment lines

Northern Illinois University students wonder about jobs after graduation.

Illinois Issues

How the people view the election

NORTHERN

NORTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY — The frustration shows on Paul Zrimsek's face as his fellow students continue to file past him on their way to vote for the school's homecoming queen.

Zrimsek, of Arlington Heights, and Tom McMahon, a fellow student, are at a table in the student union trying to spread the gospel of presidential politics according to Eugene McCarthy, former Democratic Senator from Minnesota.

McCarthy raised an army of college students to crusade for his nomination in 1968 on the issue of ending the Vietnam war. Today on the campus of Northern Illinois University he is virtually unknown and unloved.

"The amount of apathy is overwhelming. Students have a very short memory. They've forgotten that we just got done with a war that involved a lot of college students, that we've been through the worst political scandal in the country's history," says McMahon.

"College campuses are not what they used to be as far as liberalism goes," says Zrimsek. "Northern is unbelievably conservative." More than 21,000 students are one the Northern Campus.

Both students say they plan to vote in DeKalb. Others vote by absentee ballot in their hometown. A recent poll by the student newspaper showed President Ford a slight favorite over Jimmy Carter. McCarthy, the poll showed, is the choice of less than 7 per cent of the students.

"The main reason I'm for McCarthy is because he saw the realities of military spending as a one-way street leading nowhere," says McMahon, a U.S. Navy veteran.

If a vote for McCarthy is a wasted vote because of his can't win candidacy, it is not important to Zrimsek.

"So what if he can't win. What's the difference between Ford and Carter? A vote for McCarthy at least is a vote for the best candidate," he says.

William Dollear, an education major at Northern, says Carter's vagueness and Ford's record are the unanswered issues in his mind.

"The economy and unemployment are some other issues, especially among seniors who are thinking about jobs. I'm a sophomore and already thinking about it," says Dollear who will vote an absentee ballot in Chicago.

"Quite a few students here watched the debates but I think they only strengthened their opinions. If they liked Ford they liked him even more after the debates. And the same goes for Carter."

Interest in the governor's race is keen among some students, Dollear says. "A lot of kids here are from the suburbs and when they think of Howlett they think of Daley. They'll vote Republican."

Mike Azar, a senior at Northern, says many students know that Jimmy Carter's son, Chip, held a mock debate in a bar, but otherwise they are not too interested in campaigning by the candidates' wives and children.

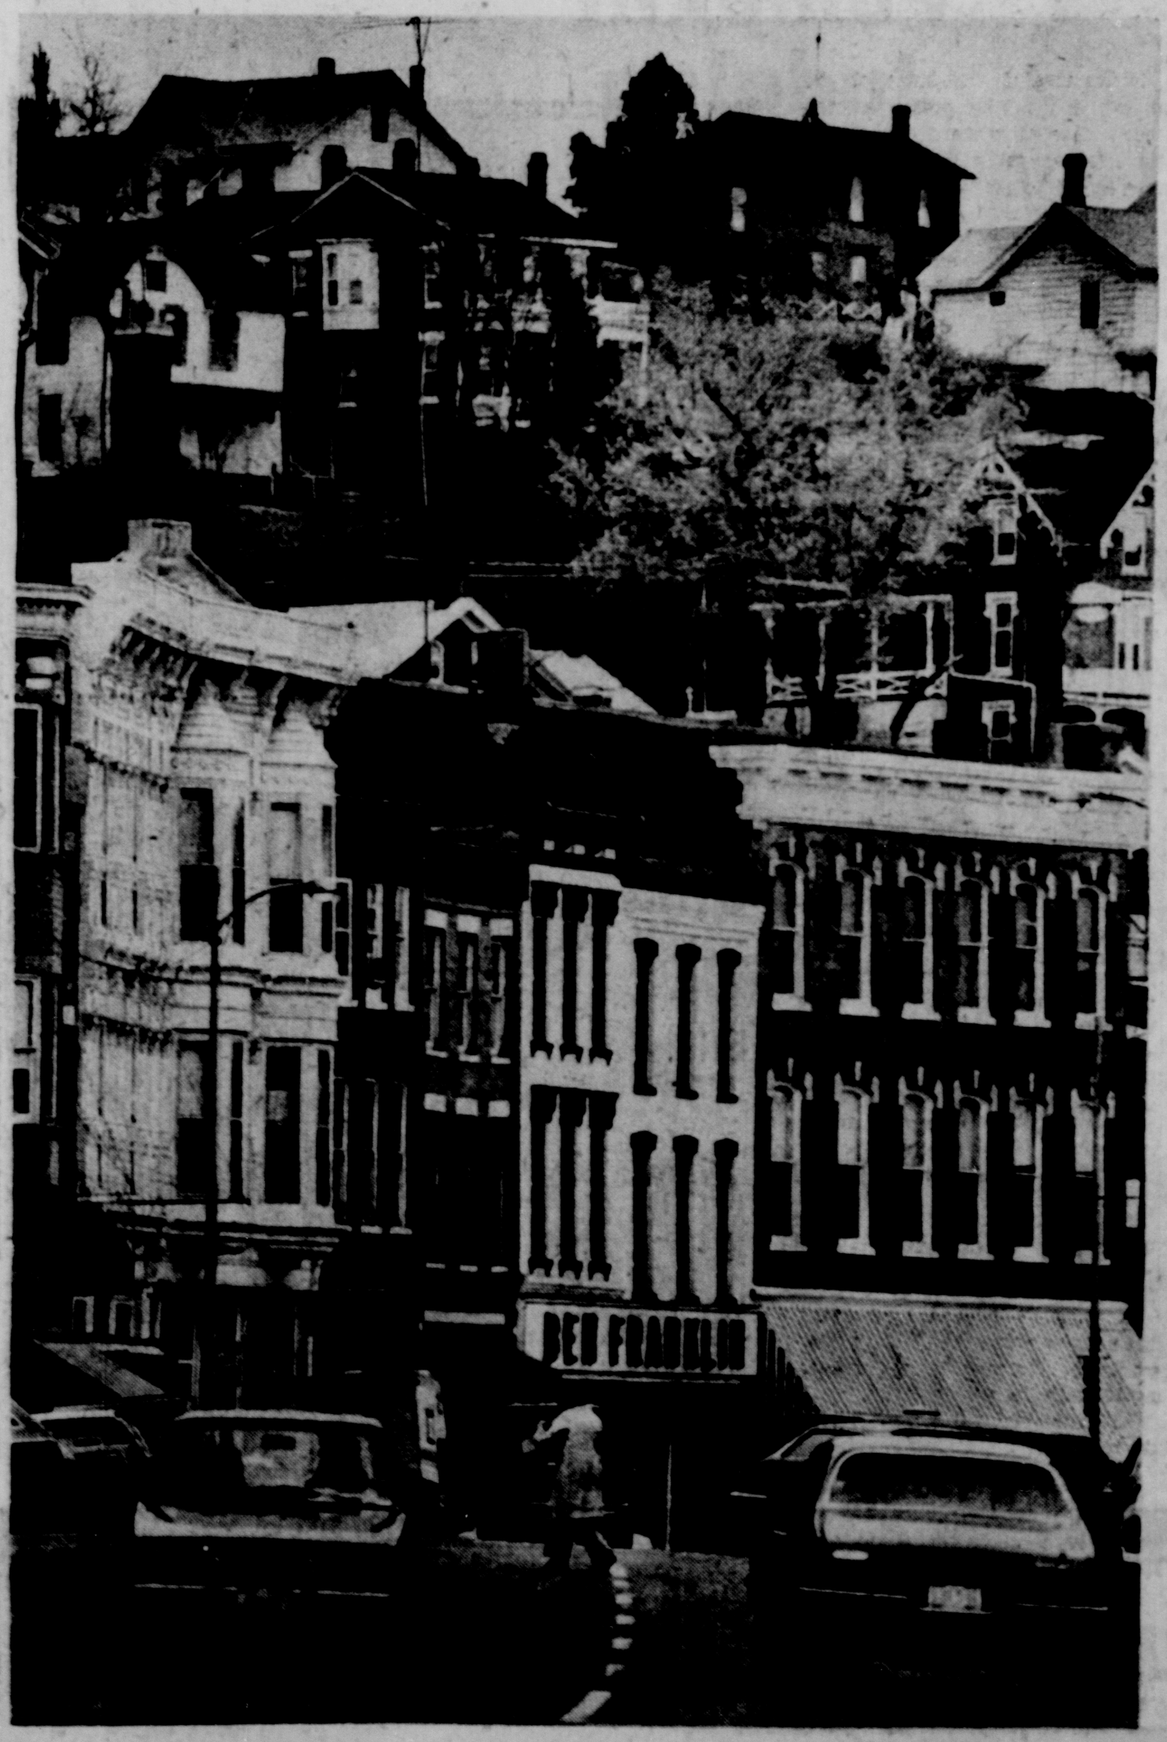

"Jack Carter was here and I don't think anyone went to see him," says Karen Kane, a senior. "He didn't really know anything about his father's positions. I think it was more of a public relations gimmick than anything else."

Dave Honor, a junior, is an undecided voter who some experts think will decide this year's Presidential election.

"Politics takes a back seat to my studies right now. I've got mid-term exams coming up," Honor says.

"The unemployment rate is definitely an issue for prospective grads, especially the number of unemployed in the field they are interested in.

"Also inflation is important. Students who are thinking about marriage want some financial stability. A lot of it comes down just to how much things cost," Honor says.

History is alive on main street in Galena.

He's no bean eater

PORT BYRON, Ill. — The biggest thing in Dale Ziegler's life this morning is a pair of bright blue new suspenders.

"I bought 'em to hold my pants up," he tells us, as if two out-of-town boys might have some other idea why a man buys new suspenders.

Ziegler runs a gas station in this Mississippi River town of 1,222 persons. He has worked on the same corner for 30 years and in that time he has formed a few opinions about politics and politicians.

"Fellas come in here and tell me, 'We'll be eatin' beans if this guy, or that guy gets elected.'

"Well, I ain't had to eat beans yet and both sides have been in."

Ziegler says he is leaning toward President Ford in this election, but not very far. "I can't see that he's been too damn far out of line. He's been telling us about issues but not telling us what he can do about them."

Taxes are on the man's mind and naturally enough he thinks they're too high. "The government wastes away my money like, well like it was their's," he says. And the billions of dollars government spends doesn't do a thing for Port Byron.

"I raised four kids and one of 'em would kind of like to stay here. But there's no opportunity. I would like to see this town expand a little. That's what I've been preachin'," he says.

The Illinois governor's election does not come any closer to Port Byron than the national race, Ziegler says.

"I don't know this guy Jim Thompson very well. But from what you gather in the newspaper, I say he's all right."

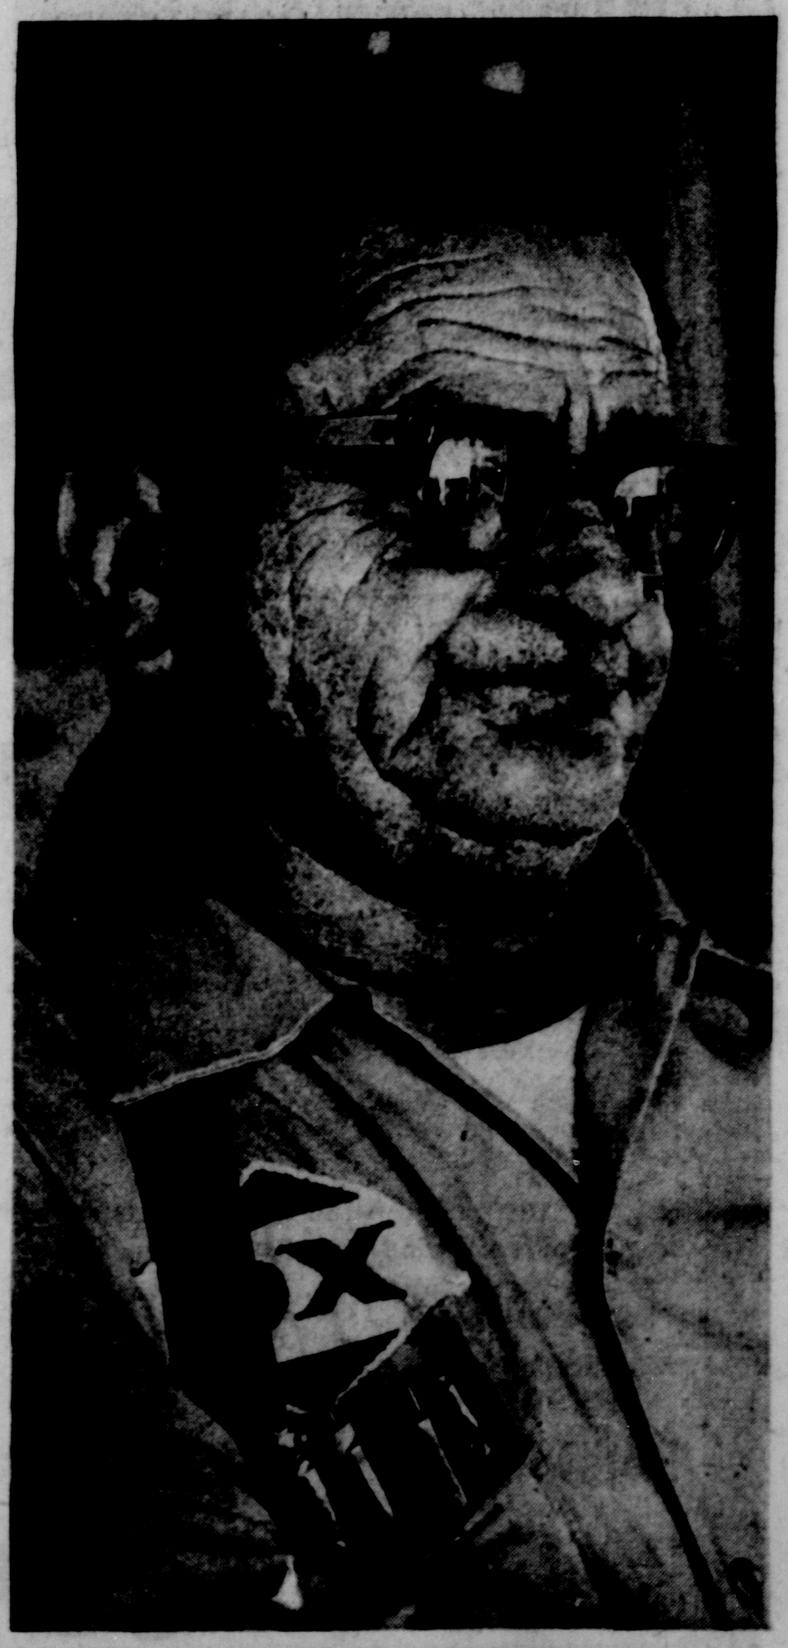

Democrat Michael Howlett is too close to Chicago Mayor Richard Daley in Ziegler's mind. "I don't believe Daley, or any one person like him, should be able to run the whole state," he says.

"Really and truly, I'm just down on politics," Ziegler says.

So will he vote?

"Sure I will. I'm a go between I vote for the man. But my vote doesn't count and neither does yours.

"The public tells who it wants elected and then the electoral college can change the whole thing. To me, that ain't right."

Dale Ziegler is down on politics.

A Baptist vision

COMO, Ill. — The Lord led Rev. Joe Walker and his wife to the corn country of northern Illinois.

They came up out of Oklahoma and Missouri, sometimes called the Bible belt, on a mission. They are Southern Baptists building a church in a country long since settled with Lutherans, Methodists and Catholics.

Two hundred people fill the Como Baptist Church to overflowing and in the six years that he has been in Como, Walker has swelled the congregation to a size where he is now talking about a building addition.

He is a soft-spoken man, too guarded to tell you right out whether he plans to vote for Ford or Carter. A vote is something kept between a man and his God.

"I would never say anything to the congregation about politics except to pray for the candidates and to urge people to go to the polls and vote," he says.

Pulpit politics "basically would be divisive in the congregation," Walker says.

"My primary responsibility is their spiritual welfare. So if I become divisive I have not helped my congregation very much. They're just as entitled to their opinions as I am, and if I voice mine, I'm obliged to give them free time to voice theirs. That would be chaotic."

Walker takes a skeptical view of the attention being paid to Jimmy Carter's Southern Baptist beliefs. He does not think Carter's religion is an issue.

"I don't think Mr. Carter pushes his religion, or that he has any right to push it," Walker says. "From what I know of Mr. Carter, he's not that good a Southern Baptist that people would want to vote for him because of his religion."

Neither candidate has paid too much attention to the issues in this campaign, he says.

"The important thing seems to be to get elected and if, as a sidelight something can be done about inflation or unemployment, fine. But the real issue is being President."

Ralph Allmon is helping to build the Como Southern Baptist Church. An evangelist from nearby Dixon, Ill., he and Walker are in the midst of a week-long prayer meeting.

Allmon, a school teacher, was raised a Southern Baptist in Tennessee, but he calls the rich farmland of northern Illinois "God's garden spot."

Being a Southern Baptist may be a political help to Carter, he says. "There are 13 million of us in the country." But in the long run, Allmon does not think religion will be a big election issue.

"A little woman asked me the other Sunday, she said she was so confused about the election and did I ever tell people who to vote for?

"Well, I said that I too didn't know what to do," Allmon says.

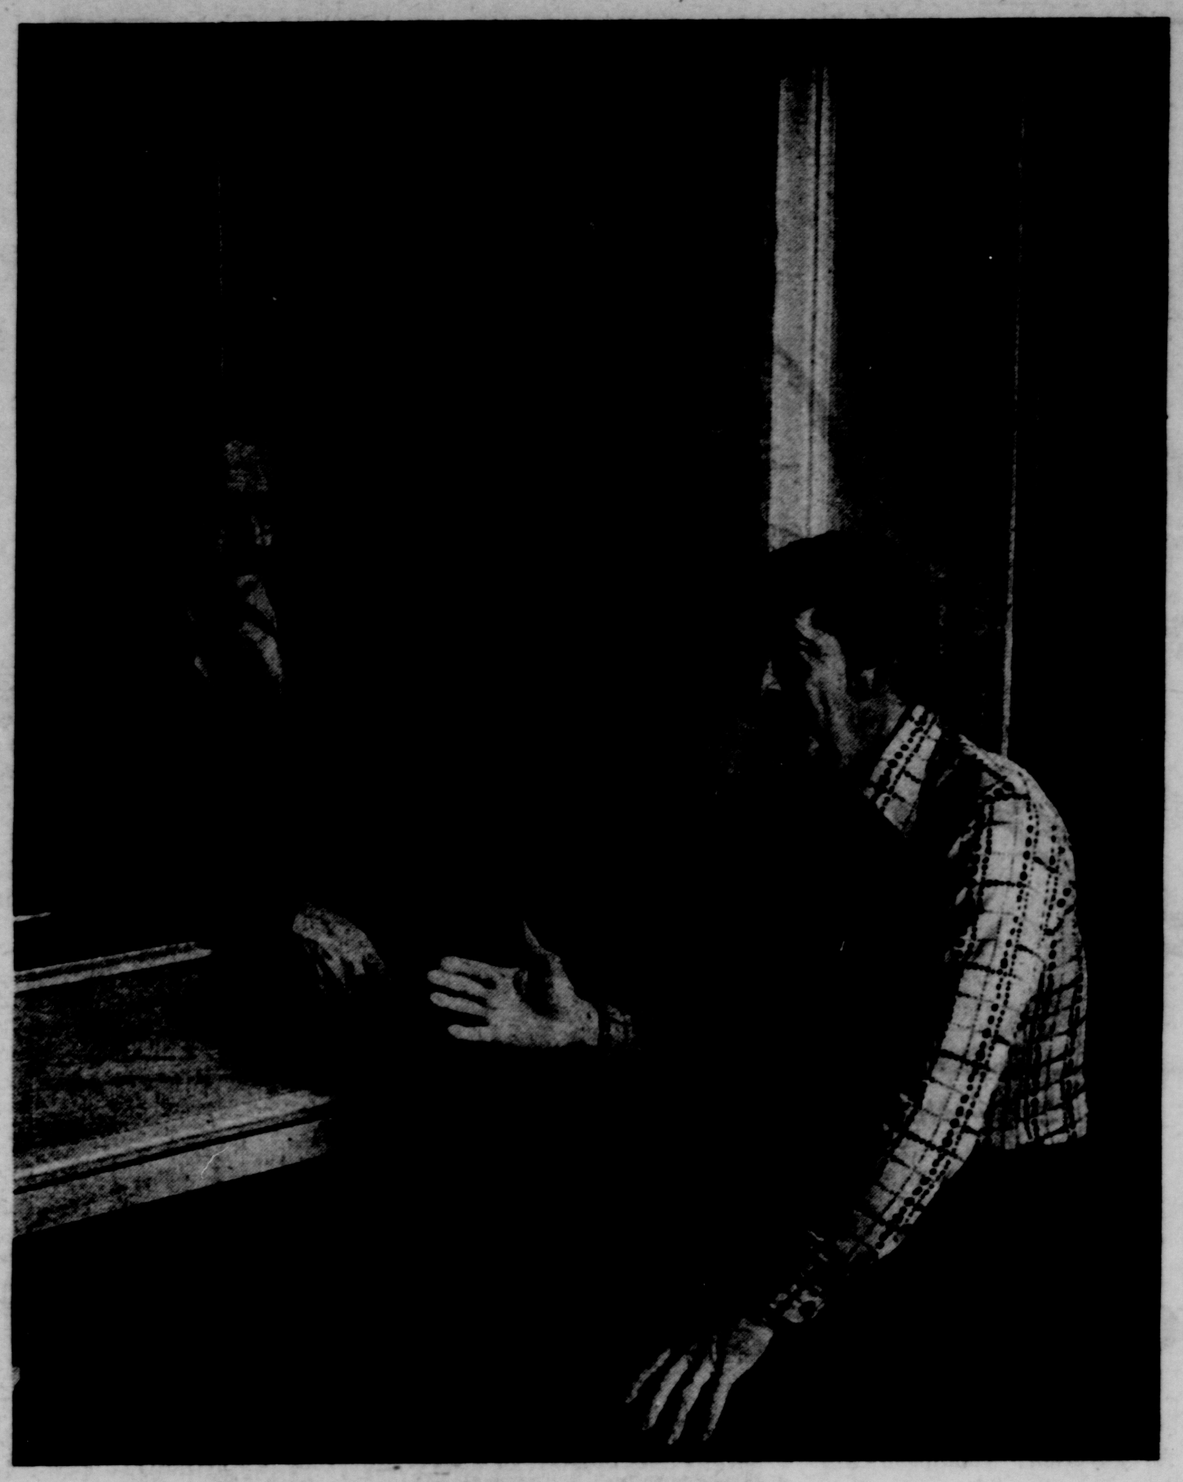

"Personally, I think the Congress is so liberal they need a restraining hand on liberal spending. President Ford, to a certain extent, has done this," he says.

"I don't really feel that unemployment is as bad as it's been pictured" and "if you know anything about inflation in the rest of the world, we don't have any inflation by comparison."

"Mr. Carter said he's going to balance the budget and eliminate unemployment and that's a lot for people to swallow," Allmon says.

Carter's Southern Baptist religion probably has attracted more attention than the religious beliefs of any other Presidential candidate since Jack Kennedy.

But Walker and Allmon say Carter's preaching takes a back seat to his politics. And his politics, they imply, are of little interest at all.

Southern Baptists follow the Lord, not Jimmy Carter.

Kathi Gentry rides the rodeo circuit.

Barrel racers

WHITESIDE COUNTY, Ill. — Kathi Gentry is a queen.

Bundled up in a red jacket, western boots and blue jeans, she is racing her three-year-old pony, Bailey's Dime, over a tight course in a small pasture and she is regal.

Kathi is a professional rodeo rider who makes her living barrel racing. Today she is trying to train her inexperienced young horse to circle the barrels with speed and precision. She is thinking about an upcoming rodeo in Philadelphia and wondering if Bailey's Dime will be ready.

"I don't like politics very much," says the attractive 25-year-old Mrs. Gentry. "This is the first election that I've taken the time to listen to what each candidate had to say.

"I like Jimmy Carter because he's from a small town. Maybe that's what our government needs to get back to."

Kathi's father was a rodeo promoter and that in time led her to ride the circuit, to big towns and small in search of cash prizes, competition and recognition in her profession.

The votes she is most concerned with are cast by the judges who watch her ride.

But this November Kathi thinks she will vote too. And if she has not made up her mind between Ford and Carter, her preference for Illinois' governor is as sure as her horsemanship.

"Thompson. No doubt," she says. "I don't know as much about him as I'd like to, but I dislike Howlett. I think he's a crook."

Kathi has nearly finished grooming Bailey's Dime after their morning workout and as she leaves the small stable she remembers something else that politics has meant to her recently.

"I hope they do something to bring gasoline prices down. We can't afford to travel in the summer anymore."

Agnew for Reagan

AGNEW, Ill. — There is a vote for Ronald Reagan in this tiny crossroads town north of the U.S. 30 blacktop.

He is Arlyn Folkers, an employe of the Kobberman Grain Co., the only business in town.

"I think we ought to have Reagan in there. He took care of California pretty good and anyone who can do anything with that mess should be able to do something for the country.

"Ford or Carter? It's all a bunch of baloney as far as I'm concerned," Folkers says.

That, as the saying goes, is one man's opinion. And in a town of just 12 people, like Agnew, one man's opinion can be pretty important.

Striking it rich?

MOLINE, Ill. — Names, faces and phrases from past elections seem to creep across Stewart Smith's memory as he and his son, Steven, sit together in the United Auto Workers' union kitchen two blocks from the John Deere farm equipment plant.

"At the start of the campaign I had my money on old reliable — Hubert Humphrey. He's a labor man, you know. Jimmy Carter? He's young but maybe he's getting his start," the elder Smith says.

Stewart Smith, 53, his 28-year-old son, Steven, and some 27,000 other UAW workers are on strike against the John Deere company for higher wages and other job benefits, for a bigger slice of the American pie.

The union kitchen is warm on an unseasonably cold night. There is bean soup, baloney sandwiches, beer and moral support for their collective position. There is also a lot of time to think and talk about politics.

"Me and my wife have fought and fought over this one. But when Ford pardoned Nixon, that was it for me," says Ron Summer, 28, who is leaning against his car at one of the John Deere factor gates.

"If I go to the grocery store and rob it, they won't let me off — even if my uncle were the judge."

Summer says he was taking home $210 a week before he went out on strike at the beginning of October. With a wife and family he now draws $50 a week strike pay. A single worker gets $40 a week union benefits.

"When you go into the store and look at a frozen pizza and one week it costs 67 cents and the next week it's 82 cents, that's what concerns a man on strike," he says.

Maybe because he walked away from his job, Dan Baraks does not pay homage to the unemployment issue.

"In this area, if you want a job you can get a job," he says. "A man doesn't have to make $7 or $10 an hour. He can get a job where he'll make enough to get by.

"If you can get something for nothing, welfare, you'll take it. I was on unemployment for two months in 1970 and I didn't like it.

"Even now I'd rather be at work. But you look at the profits of this company, millions of dollars, and the little guy, the union guy is not getting anything—that's why we're striking," Baraks says.

Stewart Smith cannot really gripe about Gerald Ford's two years "I personally feel sorry for Ford and I've been a Democrat all my life. I think he wants to do the job but he doesn't know how," he says.

A Democrat all his life, a union man since 1942, a Humphrey backer, and still Smith shakes his head no when asked about Michael Howlett.

"I was a Walker man," he says. "I served on a school board near Viola, Ill., and I understand what Walker was trying to do. If you give the money to schools you're going to have to push taxes up."

"I'm a Democrat, but I'm not going to vote for Howlett. If Daley wants to be governor, let him run for it," says Steven Smith.

The conversation drifts into Carter's controversial Playboy interview and morality in Washington.

"People like to hear about it, but I don't care," Steven says. "The Playboy interview wwas a bunch of bunk."

"If a guy's out hanky-pankying, that's his damn business," says Stewart Smith. "It's what he does in Washington that's important."

Out on the picket line Baraks has a like reaction.

"When my Playboy came I read the interview — read it even before I looked at the centerfold. I wanted to see what the big to-do was all about.

"Boy, was I disappointed," he says.

Both Smiths say they plan to vote Nov. 2. "I was one of the 25 per cent who didn't vote for Nixon in 1972 and I'm kind of proud of that," Steven says.

"Anyone who doesn't vote is a turkey. That's just the way it is," Baraks says.

Inside the union kitchen night is giving way to day and a new four-hour strike shift is starting with Linda Etheridge on the John Deere picket line.

"Vote? You bet I am," she says. "I think we need a change, a turnover from top to bottom, I really do." The words might have come right off a Carter campaign brochure.

And for the governor of Illinois?

"I've got to vote for Thompson," she says. "I think Mayor Daley's got Howlett under his thumb. Daley might be a good Mayor up there in Chicago, but we don't need him here. I think he's got Howlett and everybody else under his thumb."

A Reagan vote in Agnew.

Seeking integrity

GALENA, Ill. — Dave Hamilton is a figure of authority in this picturesque town that looks like it slipped off the front of a postcard and into real life.

As principal of the Middle School, Hamilton makes the rules for students and teachers. There is an honest, no nonsense quality in his manner that seems right for the job he does.

"I have to agree with Ford and Carter that honesty in government by elected officials is the important issue today. And I mean at every level, from the most important office to the smallest town post," Hamilton says.

"The economy that everyone talks about has been pretty darn good around here. But if John Deere in Moline stays out on strike, you might see it get pretty bad."

Jim Brady teaches social studies at the Galena Middle School and considers himself a political conservative.

"I was very impressed with Carter's talk about reorganizing the government," Brady says. "But then he talks a lot about new programs and new spending and I wonder how honest he is about reorganization."

Hamilton and Brady both watched the Ford-Carter debates but without much enthusiasm.

"Like they say, most arguments are sound — all sound," Hamilton says. "I didn't see much in the debates. All they did was repeat everything they had already said."

"The debates were an exercise in futility," says Brady. "Both men were concerned with winning points and being cute, more like a high school debate."

Brady says he wants to read Carter's controversial Playboy interview before he makes up his mind about the Georgia Democrat. "I don't think most people know what Carter really said except for the part about adultery," he says.

In the widely-publicized interview, Carter said that he had lusted in his mind but that he believes God has forgiven him. Apparently so has Hamilton.

"If the thing that has been dwelled on in that interview is true, and if most men do something similar, maybe we ought to mark one more point up for Mr. Carter's honesty. But I doubt that I'd have ever told all that to Playboy magazine, if I were running for President," he says.

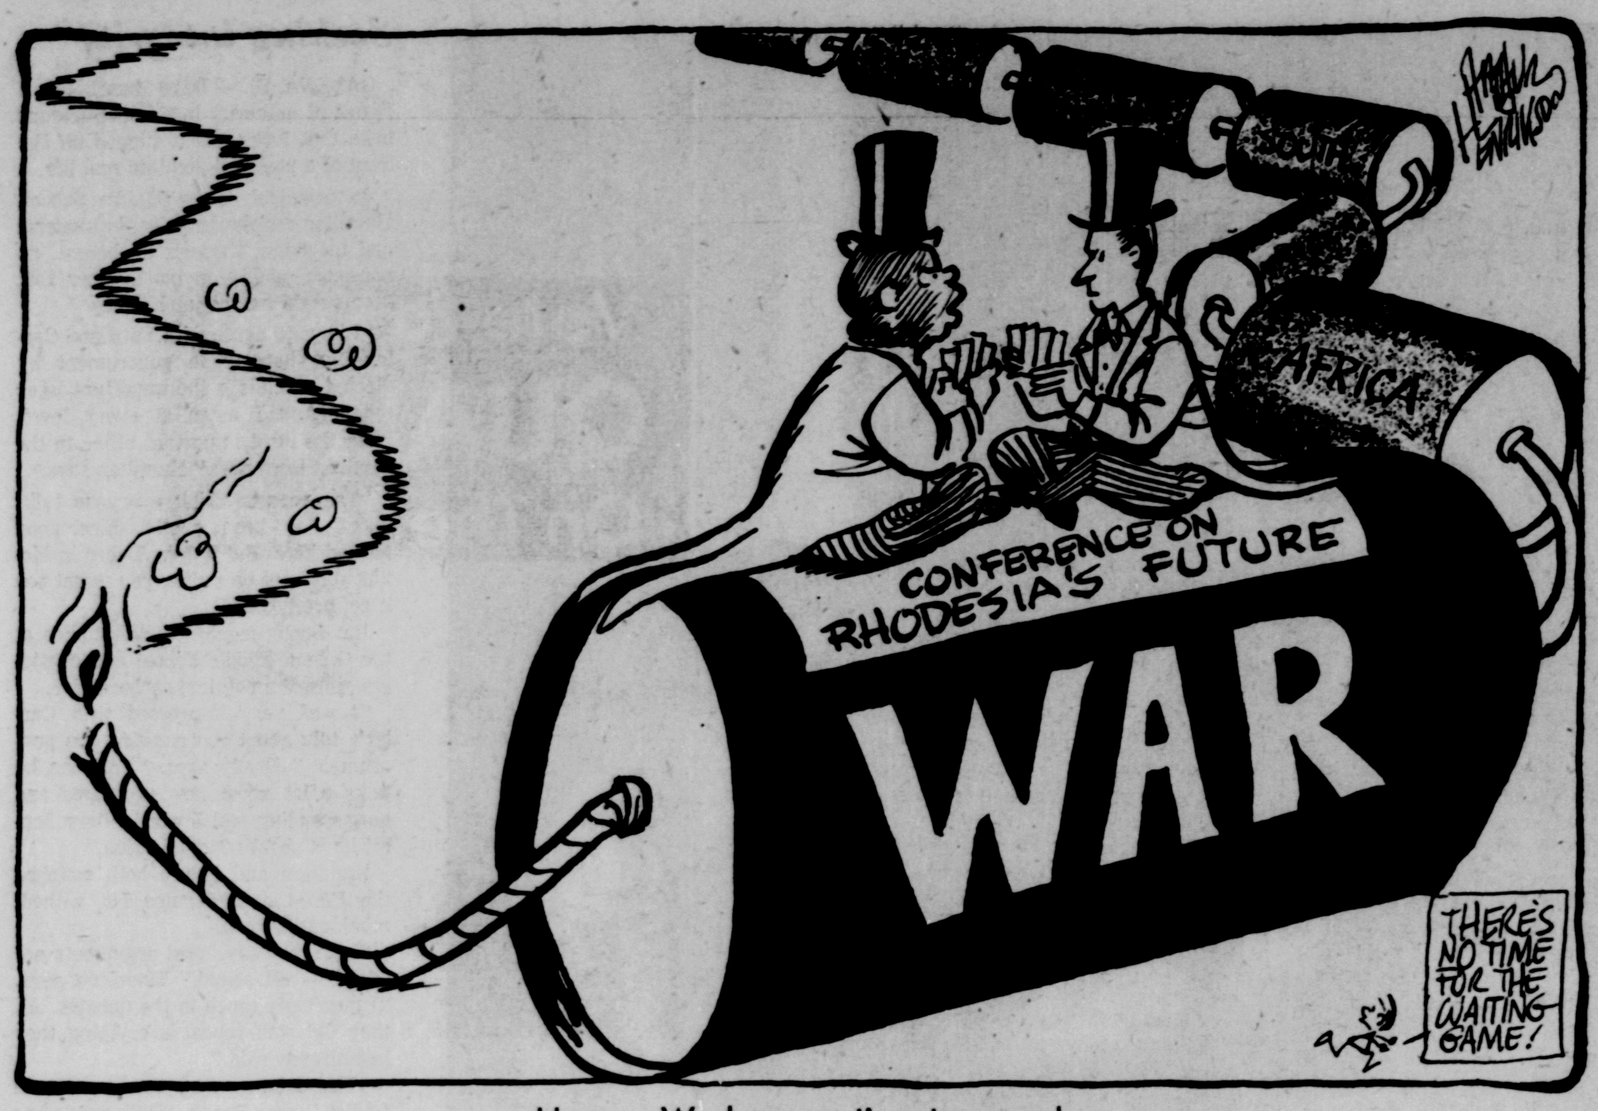

Hamilton has been an Illinois resident for just nine years but that, he says, is long enough to have suspicions about Chicago Mayor Richard Daley and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Michael Howlett.

"If you're swinging big with the biggest Democratic figure in the state, I have to question how honest the man is," he says of Howlett.

Brady says he needs more time to size up both Ford and Carter before he decides how he'll vote. A lot of other Americans are doing the same thing and the election will be tight, he predicts.

The everyday world of trick or treat

People of Rolling Meadows, remember, we elected these officials. What comes next? Will the residents not be allowed to have garage sales because they are engaged in making a profit from items they no longer want? After all, this is a business venture on residential property. The city ordinances prohibit operating businesses in residential areas. Please don't try to say all garage sale proceeds go to a non-profit organization. I didn't fall off the pumpkin wagon yesterday. And that brings up a rather sore subject.

Why, after being incorporated into the city for approximately four years, did the council now decide the Grismers couldn't sell pumpkins? They allowed them to do it for the past three years.

Look out now. We had better start writing letters to Santa Claus at the North Pole to insure he has a license and his sleigh has a city sticker. I hope the city can't find an ordinance covering the category of reindeer. They probably will meet now to iron out policy so there won't be a chance of hoof and mouth disease being brought to the city. Next may come the Easter bunny and the banning of dyes to color eggs. Turkeys got off the hook because they don't have feathers when you buy them, so the chance of getting a lice infection is nil.

Thanks for reading this letter. Living in a democracy has its advantages. We have a free press and individuals are allowed to voice their opinions. We also have the right to vote. The majority of the people in the city voted to elect these officials, and now it is up to us to obey the laws. It just seems much better use could be made of the council's time and effort. Let's pray democracy prevails and we have another election.

It is certainly beyond comprehension why the Palatine Village Board designated the hours between 4 and 9 p.m. for "trick or treat" this year.

As Halloween falls on a Sunday, with all the children home from school all day, wouldn't the early afternoon hours, between 1 and 5 p.m., be more reasonable — and more safe?

With our time being changed on Saturday night, it will be getting dark earlier —just shortly after the children are to begin their house to house journey.

And how do you explain to a kindergarten age child that he must wait all day before getting started on something he has been looking forward to for weeks?

Last week I took my 4½-year-old daughter and her year-old brother to Klehms to buy pumpkins. She was so proud to pick them herself.

I was just about ready to carve them when somebody stole them from the front of our house. Can you imagine stealing little girl's and her brother's pumpkins? She was full of tears.

If you "kids" get such a big enjoyment stealing little girls' pumpkins, then I don't know what this world is coming to.

Abortion will not stop child beating

I shared Joan Haase's outrage upon reading accounts of the last hours of little Melisha Gibson. As a mother I find such stories hardly credible. But I cannot support her final paragraph which calls for abortion on demand as a solution to this type of situation.

The underlying attitude present in the abortion on demand statement, that, if a pregnancy is inconvenient or unwanted, end it, is essentially that of Mr. Gibson to whom Melisha's presence was inconvenient and unwanted. If a parent has the right to end a child's life after four months in the womb, why not, then, after four months in the world, or four years for that matter.

No, Joan Haase, what we don't need is more abortion on demand and a fostering and promulgation of the attitude that anyone has the right to take a human life because that person is inconvenient or unwanted. What we need is for people of love like you and me to gather together in spirit, if not in body, and reaffirm in our prayers and by our actions our belief in the necessity of an attitude of reverence for human life in all its stages. For as Dr. Seuss's Horton says, "A person's a person, no matter how small."

Thompson, O'Neal best for state

All indications point to a landslide victory next Tuesday for Republican gubernatorial candidate James R. Thompson.

Thompson has run a long, energetic, constructive campaign for the office. He has traveled the length of the state many times, becoming familiar with the people of Illinois and the issues facing state government.

He has grown remarkably in the months since he entered the race. He started as a corruption-fighting U.S. attorney little known outside the Northern District of Illinois. He now seems at ease with his role as a politically astute candidate with carefully drawn positions. He is known and respected throughout the state.

He is the type of candidate voters thought they were choosing four years ago when they elected maverick Democratic Gov. Daniel Walker.

It is a pleasure to endorse Thompson's candidacy.

As governor, Thompson will help restore confidence in state government and strip away some of the cynicism surrounding our political leadership.

His opponent, Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, is a man of administrative experience and integrity. His friend and mentor, Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, should have let him continue in the secretary of state's office, as Howlett preferred, rather than slating him for the governor's chair.

It is possible, in drawing up the Democrats' state ticket, that Mayor Daley was simply demonstrating his insensitivity to politics outside Chicago. It's also possible Daley was more interested in knocking Walker out of the Democratic primary than he was in getting a Democrat into the governor's mansion.

Whatever his motivations, it has become apparent that Daley's choice of Howlett was not a good one and Thompson's candidacy has far outshadowed Howlett's.

Thompson has discussed the issues. He has come down on the right side of most of them. He has presented himself as an articulate, thoughtful, honest politician free of commitments to political machines.

He has much to learn, in running a large administrative office and in dealing with the General Assembly. Many problems press in upon state government, and the job will require the full application of his talents.

We are confident of his potential, but he will have to prove himself once in office.

While the governor's race seems a safe bet for Thompson, we urge readers not to become complacent. Preelection support must be converted to votes at the ballot box.

While a vote for governor is a vote for his running mate as lieutenant governor, we are also enthusiastic in our support of Thompson's ticket mate, Dave O'Neal.

O'Neal, currently sheriff of St. Clair County, is also the kind of candidate who will improve the public's regard for elected officials.

He clearly has higher aspirations in government, yet he has also pledged close cooperation with Thompson during the next two years. We believe he can contribute to the effective operation of the executive branch of Illinois government.

Puerto Rico

There's at least one place where the people will vote

by DON OAKLEY

There is one place where voter apathy will not be a problem on election day.

At 2:00 p.m., November 2, almost half the three million American citizens of Puerto Rico will allow themselves to be locked in school classrooms or confined in tents. Inside, they will wait up to two hours until their names are called in alphabetical order.

Then they will sign a register, receive a long paper ballot and go inside a curtained booth to vote for governor, legislators, mayors and councilmen. After everyone has voted, they will be free to go.

There is no law that says Puerto Ricans have to vote this way, except the law of custom. The unique balloting procedure has long been a tradition on the island commonwealth.

Wholesale disinterest in the political process simply does not exist among Puerto Ricans. This year, even as some forecasters predict that a minority of eligible U.S. voters will turn out on November 2, over 80 per cent of Puerto Rican voters will visit the polls, gathering en masse in their precincts.

This kind of turnout is not considered unusual, since fully 95 per cent of voting age citizens in Puerto Rico are registered to vote. This is almost as high as Australia, where although there is a fine for not registering to vote, registration has never exceeded 96 per cent.

There are other signs that participatory democracy is alive and well in Puerto Rico. Each of the four political parties has its own flag, and during the election campaign the party flags snap and flutter over nearly every house and alongside every roadside. Night rallies are well-attended events.

Yet with all their political enthusiasm, Puerto Rican voters have shown themselves to be somewhat conservative. Extremist actions by the New York-center FALN (nationalists) have been universally repudiated on the island itself, the vast majority favors continued close relations with the United States, either through statehood or the present commonwealth association.

Now if only we could import some of that Puerto Rican political enthusiasm to the mainland.

A man to few friends

Splendid isolation and Carter

by TOM TIEDE

With The Carter Campaign — (NEA) — As he endlessly reminds us Jimmy Carter was unsung, ignored and unsupported when he began his quest for the presidency. But that was then. Now as heir apparent to the Oval Office, he cannot move without the clicking of a hundred Nikons, he does not speak without the world listening in, and his support is such he has become one of the most influential men in America.

What does all this sudden fortune do to a politician? The question worries at least a few of Carter's friends, and perhaps many of his enemies. His allies fear the candidate may be losing touch with reality, which is to say people; critics speculate more harshly that he shows signs of being swept up in a process that leads to withdrawal and from thence to the dangers of Executive Isolation.

To be sure, the Georgian cannot escape some of this misfortune. When George Washington turned down the offers to be king, he did not end the idea that the American presidency was royalty. Therefore, Jimmy Carter is forced to be a kind of prince, protected by federal centurions, insulated from everyday life, venerated beyond reason and financed in his lofty existence by $21 million from the genuflecting citizenry.

And if elected Carter's adulation and emolluments will grow. No throne was ever occupied by men so high and mighty as presidents. The chief executive has five Boeing 707s at his disposal, also a dozen smaller passenger jets, some 16 soundproof helicopters, a yacht, a fleet of automobiles, an army of security people and more than 500 employes. Estimates are that it costs well over $50 million, and probably closer to $100 million annually to support the president.

When Tom Jefferson was in the White House, the roof leaked. When Abe Lincoln died, his widow had to beg Congress to provide her with a $5,000 pension. Today, as John Dean puts it, the presidency is so magnificently privileged that "inside, you get the feeling that nothing can ever hurt you if you don't allow it to."

And so: Executive Isolation, the disease of presidents.

There is only one sure vaccine: humility. But little of it is available to those men wrapped up in the election process. One recalls George McGovern of four years ago. Before his nomination he was a wonderful hayseed, a simple man in green iridescent suit who had a vision for America. Then the campaign got him. In the end he wound up a twisted zealot, wearing tailored attire to befit his station and burdened with a vision that had been shrunk to his own purpose.

Carter aides insist this will not happen to their champion. Actually some of it already has. Where once he was the most available candidate in America, walking the streets to greet the people, he has now retreated in success to the inner sanctum of his ambitions. He still greets people, but only in a carefully crafted mass audience, that sea of upturned faces which has nothing to do with the real world.

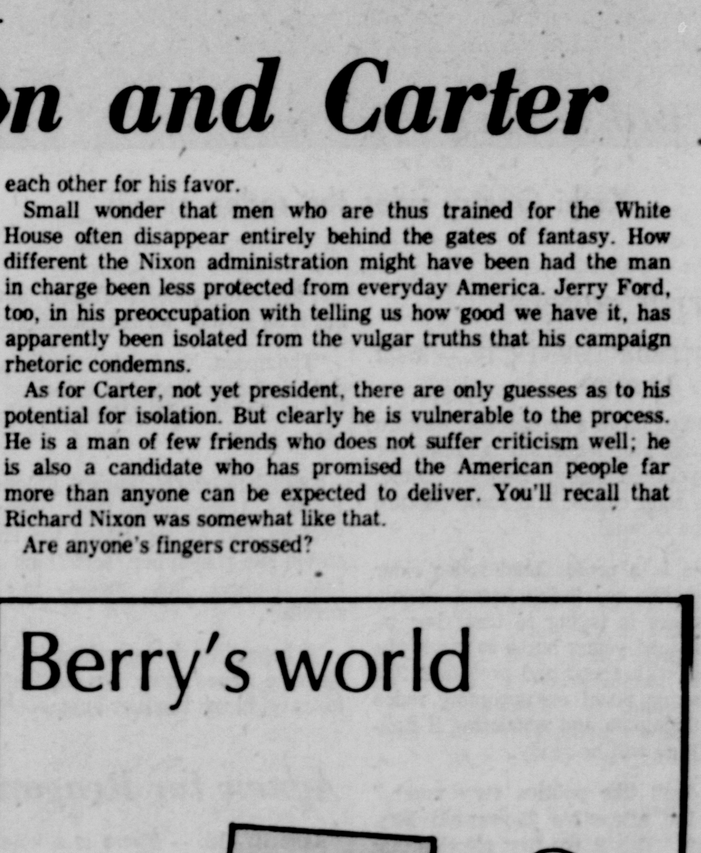

This then is the beginning of decay: the loss of being personal. The candidate has become a thing, albeit an awesome thing. He is surrounded by sentries who are authorized to kill in his behalf; he is never seen in public, except by a crowd which has been gathered for the purpose; he never waits for a plane, is hampered by traffic, or lacks for powerful men and women who compete with each other for his favor.

Small wonder that men who are thus trained for the White House often disappear entirely behind the gates of fantasy. How different the Nixon administration might have been had the man in charge been less protected from everyday America. Jerry Ford, too, in his preoccupation with telling us how good we have it, has apparently been isolated from the vulgar truths that his campaign rhetoric condemns.

As for Carter, not yet president, there are only guesses as to his potential for isolation. But clearly he is vulnerable to the process. He is a man of few friends who does not suffer criticism well; he is also a candidate who has promised the American people far more than anyone can be expected to deliver. You'll recall that Richard Nixon was somewhat like that.

Are anyone's fingers crossed?

Sears agrees to open doors to its competitors

Sears, Roebuck and Co., the country's largest merchandiser, has agreed not to keep competing stores from moving into scores of shopping centers where it operates across the nation, the Federal Trade Commission said Thursday.

The agreement grew out of a complaint which alleged that Chicago-based Sears, either as a major tenant or the owner of a shopping center, had worked out agreements over the years "to maintain, control, fix and establish the range of prices, the range of fashions, the range of quality and the retail selling prices of goods and services offered for sale by tenants in shopping centers."

Sears issued a statement saying that the FTC complaint had addressed practices in the industry which "have been common for more than 25 years." The company noted that the FTC had moved in a similar direction against other retailers during the last five years and said it would have been "more appropriate" if the agency had issued a general rule governing the entire industry.

SEARS SAID that shopping center restrictions were necessary in the early days of developing such complexes in order to get merchandises to commit themselves to what they then considered risky investments. The company added that the reference to price fixing was "highly misleading."

Sears is a major tenant in 265 shopping centers including Woodfield in Schaumburg and through its subsidiary, Homart Development Co., it is the owner and major tenant of 16 shopping centers and part owner of five others. The company reports more than $12 billion in sales per year.

The settlement says that Sears may not prohibit other department stores, junior department stores, discount stores or variety stores from coming into a shopping center where it is doing business.

In addition, the company may not make agreements which limit the hours of business, the price range or quality of merchandise for sale, or the amount of floor space that other stores are allowed.

The agreement, however, does allow Sears to maintain a few restrictions on other outlets which may be doing business in the neighborhood. It may still, for instance, prohibit space from being leased nearby to "clearly objectionable types of tenants, including . . . establishments selling or exhibiting pornographic materials, massage parlors, and body and fender shops."

Business briefs

September trade loss is 4th highest

The United States in September posted its fourth highest trade deficit ever as both imports and exports approached record levels, the government said Thursday. In its monthly report on trade, the Commerce Dept. said the nation imported $778.9 million more in goods than it exported last month. U.S. imports rose 2 per cent last month to $10.6 billion — the second largest import figure on record. Exports also posted their second highest total ever, rising 1.9 per cent to $9.8 billion. At this time last year, the United States was running a trade surplus of $8.09 billion. Currently, the nation has a $3.41 billion deficit. The U.S. economy has improved much more rapidly than the economies of other countries. As a result, this nation has more money to spend on foreign products, while other countries, whose economies are still in the recovery stage, have little to spend on U.S. goods, administration economists said.

British pound continues to slide

Britain's pound fell to a new low against the dollar Thursday while leaders of the ruling Labor party squabbled publicly over economic policy. The pound slid to a low of $1.5610 against the dollar. Sterling had opened at $1.5710 compared with Wednesday's closing of $1.5760. It dropped to $1.5680, then recovered briefly before falling to the new record low. Foreign exchange dealers said the new drop was sparked by a 13-6 vote of the left-wing dominated National Executive Committee of the Labor party demanding the government restore planned spending cuts and apply "Socialist" measures to cure the ailing economy. Prime Minister James Callaghan stormed out of the meeting when it rejected the government's economic policies.

Brokers challenge Carter ad

The National Assn. of Realtors Thursday challenged a Jimmy Carter campaign television commercial suggesting family ownership of homes has dropped 18 percentage points in the past eight-years to a new low of 32 per cent. Philip C. Smabey, president of the 500,000-member organization, said home ownership by husband and wife families rose from 70 per cent in 1970 to 75 per cent. Home ownership for all Americans, Smabey said, actually rose from 63 per cent in 1970 to 65 per cent.

Tokyo has highest costs: survey

A survey by the Union Bank of Switzerland has determined that Tokyo is the world's most expensive city in which to live and Bogota, Colombia, is the cheapest. In its survey of 41 major cities, the bank discovered salaries are highest in Chicago. Food costs the most in Tokyo, Stockholm, Geneva and Copenhagen and is cheapest in Bogota, Buenos Aires and Dublin. Manama, the capital of Bahrein, has the world's most expensive clothing, followed by Paris, Hong Kong, Geneva and Caracas. The cheapest clothing is in Bogota, London and Singapore. Apartments are most costly in New York and Panama and the cheapest in Manila and Vienna. Restaurant and hotel prices are highest in Manama, Paris, Buenos Aires and Geneva and lowest in Bogota, Johannesburg, Madrid and Istanbul, the Union Bank said. With Geneva and Zurich both indexed at 100 in the survey, Tokyo's rating was 121. The New York index was set at 92, Paris at 91 and Brussels at 90.

The Union Bank said it used a computer to collect and analyze the cost of 7,500 individual items in the 41 cities. After Tokyo, the ranking by expense of the other 40 cities was: Manama, Oslo, Stockholm, Zurich, Geneva, Copenhagen, Tel Aviv, New York, Paris, Brussels, Montreal, Toronto, Chicago, Helsinki, Hong Kong, Duesseldorf, Los Angeles, Caracas, San Francisco, Sydney and Mexico City.

Dow loses 3 points, closes at 952

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wall Street's uncertainties over the course of the economy and the presidential election drove prices lower Thursday for the first time in three sessions in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up about three points at the outset, lost 3.49 to 952.63 after gaining 18.12 the two previous sessions.

Declines topped advances, 694 to 662, among the 1,846 issues crossing the tape. There were 490 unchanged issues, reflecting investor uncertainty.

Volume totaled 16,920,000 shares, up from the 15,790,000 traded Wednesday.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share decreased two cents. Volume totaled 1,670,000 shares, compared with 1,680,000 traded Wednesday.

Expert sees economy improving

by LEA TONKIN

Americans can expect continued improvement in the economy for the next two years, regardless of the outcome of the presidential election, predicts William W. Tongue, professor of economics and finance at University of Illinois Chicago Circle campus.

Speaking at a recent business conference in Schaumburg, Tongue said the current "pause" in the economic indicators will be followed by improvements, particularly in the Chicago metropolitan area.

Tongue is head of the finance department at the U. of Illinois Chicago Circle and is a consultant to the conference's sponsor, the Bank of Elk Grove.

THE ECONOMIST said consumer confidence, an improved housing market, a slight increase in commercial loans and projections for a boost in capital spending will add to the strength of the nation's economic improvement. The temporary lag in economic indicators will be followed by new orders for nondurable products, he said.

Tongue does not foresee a continued decline in the inflation rate, and he said widespread unemployment may remain a problem.

A victory by Gerald Ford in the Nov. 2 presidential election will likely mean a "rather irregular but fairly steady upward track" in the economy, Tongue said.

He said Arthur Burns, head of the Federal Reserve Board, will remain at his post for at least another year, signaling the potential slowdown in U.S. economic growth when Burns decides the rate is too high.

A JIMMY CARTER victory will lead to a different scenario by late 1977 or early 1978, Tongue said. Carter probably would encourage faster economic growth, but he also might call for voluntary wage limit guidelines and price controls, the economist said. Tongue said income guidelines "treated gingerly" could stall inflation rate hikes. He was critical of price controls, however.

The expected increase in prices charged by Mideast petroleum producing nations will not severely affect the economy, Tongue said.

Tongue also predicts a further tax cut during 1977 if present economic trends continue.

Ad programs lure investors

Speaking dollar-wise

by Robert S. Rosefsky

My travels in recent weeks have taken me to half a dozen of the nation's major cities, and as an addicted newspaper reader I try to keep up on the local journals.

And what should keep popping up in full-page ads everywhere I visited but inducements to buy Krugerrands. And, as I expected on my return, there were letters awaiting me from readers asking "What's the deal with Krugerrands? Who's selling them, and are they a good buy?"

The question of who is selling them is a natural one, for the ads do not indicate who the advertiser really is.

My research discloses that the outfit behind the ads is a firm called International Gold Corp., which represents an association of South African gold mines. International Gold has been given a multimillion-dollar advertising budget by the mines group to do one very simple thing: sell gold.

THE KRUGERRAND is legitimate South African currency, containing one ounce of pure gold. Actually the coin weighs a bit more than one aunce Pure gold is too soft to be used in coinage, so it's combined with other metal to form a tougher alloy. But the pure gold is there. The value of the Krugerrand is directly tied to the world gold price, quoted daily in most papers, plus whatever commission you've paid to buy, and whatever commission you might have to pay if you wanted to sell.

As the ads for the Krugerrands indicate, there is no collector value to the coins being offered. They're gold, and their commercial value is backed by the monetary system of the South African government. Counterfeiting would be difficult but not impossible. Still, it wouldn't do any harm to have any contemplated purchases verified by an independent source.

A good investment? Not for my money. It's a speculation that could win you some, after commission costs, or lose you some. In the meantime your money is tied up and earning nothing for you. If you want to take a fling with a minor portion of your investment portfolio, the Krugerrand might give you an interesting play. If you do buy, shop local dealers for the best price. Markups can vary. Also consider safekeeping and insurance. If they're lost or stolen, you don't get a refund.

Radio mysteries return to spark imagination

by DIANE MERMIGAS

A door squeaks open slowly and then, suddenly, slams shut. There is a rustling of clothing and heavy panting. Footsteps hurry across the floor and finally, a blood-curdling scream.

The atmosphere is suspenseful, but the scene is whatever your imagination wants to make of it. Chicago's airwaves are rich again with such sound effects in the latest revival of radio drama led by WFMT-AM and -FM and WBBM-AM stations.

Each station is taking its own approach to the audio features: WBBM-AM sponsors the "CBS Radio Mystery Theatre" seven days each week from 10:30 to 11:30 p.m., while WFMT's Chicago Radio Theatre presents everything from gothic chillers to theater-of-the-absurd plays the second Tuesday of each month at 10:30 p.m. and the second Thursday of each month at 1 p.m.

The directors of both radio theater groups agree they are catering to a rapidly growing audience of all ages. Some of their listeners remember the golden age of radio in the 1940s before television, while others are flower children of the 1960s who were reared on blaring pop and rock music.

IN ANY CASE, they are people who have learned how to listen, how to creatively interpret the sounds that they hear and how to stretch their imaginations to the fullest.

"They listen to our productions, and their minds create the mountains and the deserts. The listener becomes part of the story-telling," said Himan Brown, executive producer and director of the "CBS Radio Mystery Theatre."

"Radio is an incredibly rich medium to work in and relatively virgin. Few people have gone deep into what can be done with sounds and effects. Artistically, we're unlimited," said Yuri Rasovsky, producer and director of WFMT's Chicago Radio Theatre and head of the All-media Dramatic Workshop which produces the shows.

"We're in the business of reaching out to people and saying here's theater and it's good stuff. You don't have to go out in traffic to get there or spend any money. Just turn on your radio, listen to it, and see if you like it," he said.

THE CHICAGO RADIO Theatre opened its 1976-77 season of plays, the fourth since its inception in 1973, with "Dracula." The gothic romance drew an estimated audience of 700,000 in the Chicago area when it was aired last week, Rasovsky said, "so, there is a very willing, accessible audience out there whose tastes are diverse."

Bela Lugosi draped in a long, black cape with his fangs sunk into some poor girl's neck makes for a frightening and even comical picture.

But there is a definite challenge in trying to create the same dramatic effects through audio means alone, and both radio theater directors sit up long nights thihking up new ways to produce a real-life sound.

The sound of Dracula sucking blood out of a young girl's vein was produced by having an actor bite into a raw chicken breast. A shipwreck scene was created by breaking up orange crates and interspersing the sounds of a recorded tidal wave.

IT TOOK MORE than an hour to create the shipwreck, with actors blowing into microphones and snapping fabric to produce the sound of slapping ship sails. The scene lasted a full 15 seconds in the final production.

"The idea would probably get across if we didn't go to so much trouble to make it sound real. But, the extra care we put into the sound effects gets people to sit on the edge of their chairs listening and becoming engrossed in what they think is real," said Rasovsky.

"Any disaster is a problem. Wind, for instance, doesn't really make a noise. All you really hear is the wind rubbing against something," he said.

So the wind becomes a synthesizer that is short-circuited, and the fog becomes a microphone shoved into an air conditioning unit.

IT TOOK THREE months to produce "Dracula" so that the final product was scary and not funny, Rasovsky said. It requires anywhere from several hours to several weeks, normally, for a cast and staff of 10 people to produce an hour-long broadcast, he said.

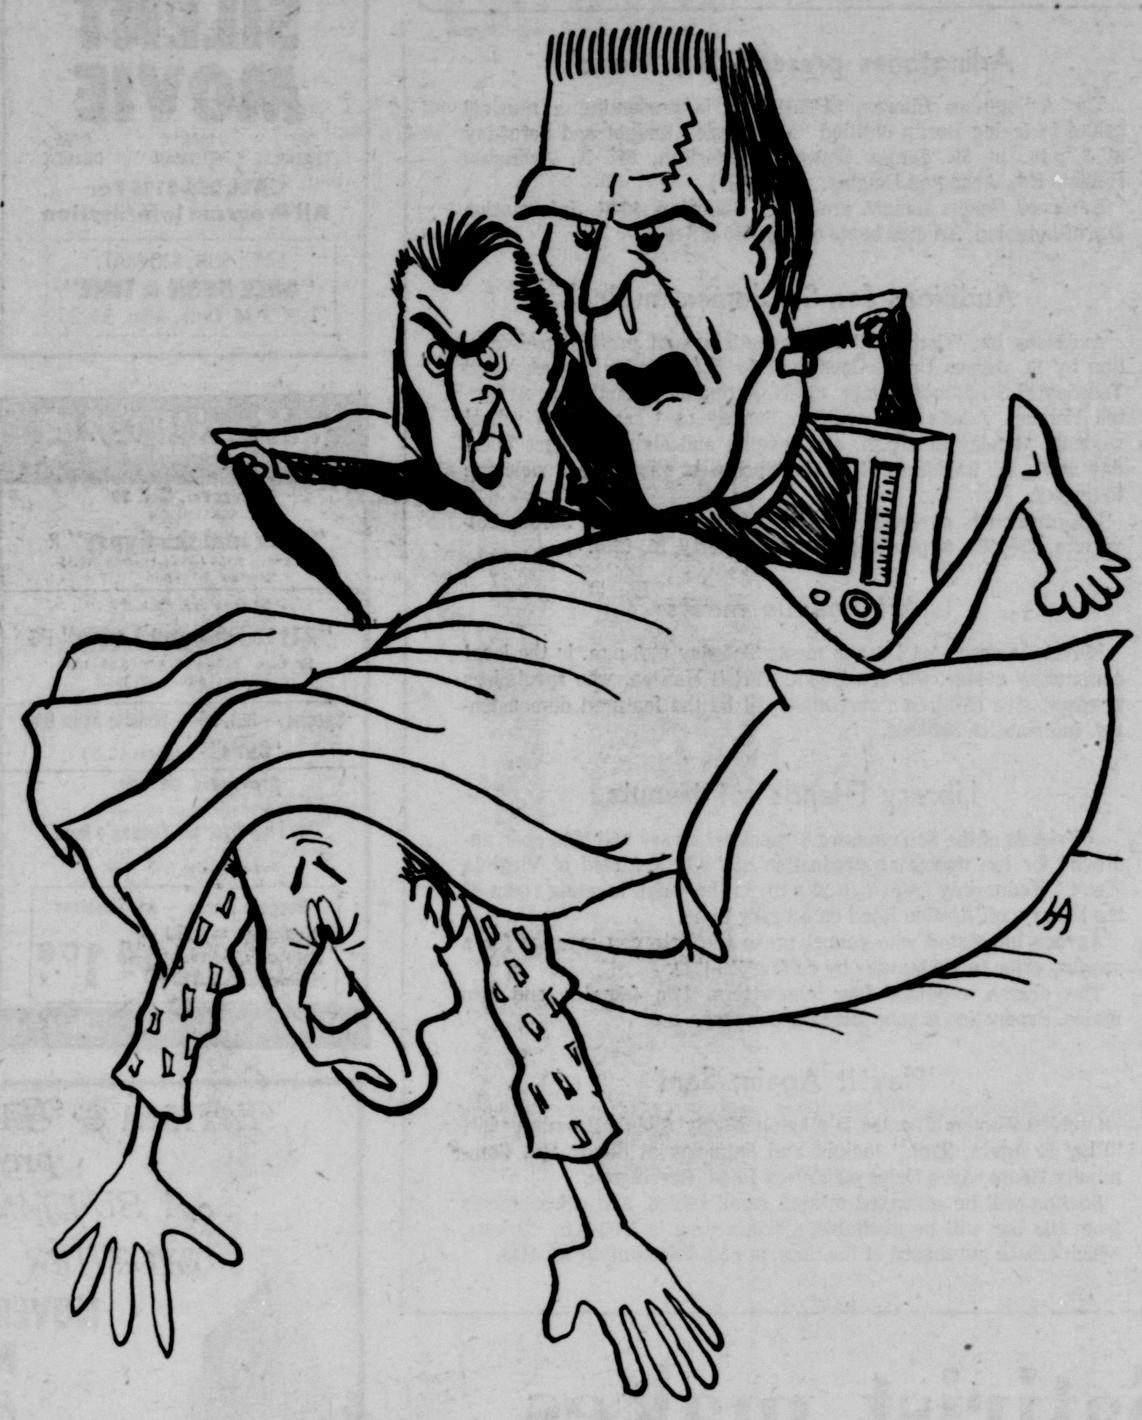

Where the WFMT workshop adapts plays and short stories for radio use, the "CBS Radio Mystery Theatre" has 10 authors turning out a barrage of original copy for each show.

It takes four hours to produce a single one-hour radio mystery in the New York City CBS studios where most "effects" problems are hurdled by distorting one sound or another, Brown said.

"But, the greatest thing we have going for us is the audience and their ability to let their imagination go. That's why radio drama is catching on like wild fire again," said Brown, who has been a radio and television producer for 40 years and was the originator of "Inner Sanctum," CBS's radio mystery series in the 1940s.

"THE CURRENT 'CBS Radio Mystery Theatre,' which has been aired nightly since January 1974, attracts 15 million nationwide listeners in a month's time.

"They listen because we give them a sense of reality, another world to immerse themselves in; and we do it with a series of tricks and gimmicks, a richness in sound and just the right timing," Rasovsky said. "It's a form of entertainment reborn and an art unto itself."

Spooky weekend on the airwaves

A blood-chilling experience can be had this Halloween weekend for those who are looking forward to curling up in a comfortable chair with the lights off and their radio turned up all the way.

The "CBS Radio Mystery Theatre," hosted by E. G. Marshall, will offer a three-day holiday celebration beginning tonight with "The Unborn" and featuring "The Witches' Sabbath" on Saturday and "The Queen of Cats" Halloween night.

THE DRAMAS WILL be aired on WBBM-AM 78 radio from 10:30 to 11:30 p.m., the standard time for the mystery theater's original "thriller" productions seven nights a week.

The Chicago Radio Theatre has also begun its 1976-77 season of radio plays, adapted from well-known works spanning the traditional to theatre-of-the-absurd.

The productions, created by the All-media Dramatic Workshop, are aired the second Tuesday of the month at 10:30 p.m. and the second Thursday of each month at 1 p.m. on WFMT-FM 98.7 and 1450-AM.

THIS SEASON'S schedule is:

Nov. 16 and 18 — "Two by Twain"
Dec. 21 and 23 — "Look: We've Come Through"
Jan. 18 and 20 — "Play Strindberg"
Feb. 15 and 17 — Of Freedom: "Fall of the City" and "Markheim"
March 15 and 17 — "Green Julia"
April 19 and 21 — "A Tale of Two Cities"

Chicago theaters host film festival

The 12th annual Chicago International Film Festival opens next Friday, Nov. 5, at two Chicago theaters, the Uptown, 4816 N. Broadway, and the Biograph, 2433 N. Lincoln.

Seventy separate film events, including short subjects and animation, documentaries and 40 new full-length features, will be shown during the two-week festival.

Films from 35 different nations have been submitted, most of which have never been shown before in this country. Many, including some American films, are either too difficult or too political in nature ever to be considered for regular distribution.

THE FESTIVAL OPENS next Friday with the premiere screening of "The Next Man" (8 p.m. at the Uptown), an American film of political intrigue and suspense directed by Richard C. Sarafian and starring Sean Connery.

The second feature, at 10:30 p.m., is "Gimme Shelter" which follows the Rolling Stones on their American tour, through performances and press conferences to present "the darker side of Woodstock Nation and a myth gone wild."

At the Biograph, 6:30 p.m. Friday, is "Lina Braake," a German film about an 82-year-old woman who is a victim of urban renewal. Forced to enter an old people's home, she decides to fight back. The German film offers a comic approach to a real problem — the plight of the elderly.

Also at the Biograph, at 9:15 p.m., is "Wives," a Norway film by women about women.

A special event scheduled is a tribute to Charlton Heston (9:15 p.m. at the Uptown Nov. 6) with Heston in person to comment on some of his films and his career.

A 12-HOUR MARATHON of Heston films will take place at the Biograph beginning at 11:30 p.m. Nov. 6. Price is $1.25. You can stay as long as you wish.

Seats are $3 for most feature films, many of which are adult-rated. Films are presented in their original language with English subtitles. Advance tickets and a complete schedule of events are available through the 12th Chicago International Film Festival, 415 N. Dearborn. Information: 644-3400 noon to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

by Genie Campbell

"GREY GARDENS," A STORY of a mother and daughter born to wealth, power and social position who are living out their lives in a decaying seaside mansion, is being shown at the Uptown Nov. 7, 8:30 p.m. The movie was directed by David and Albert Maysles, who will be present after the screening to speak with the audience about filmmaking.

A CROSS BETWEEN "Fantasia" and "Yellow Submarine" with a touch of Fellini is Bruno Bozzetto's latest feature-length animated film, "Allegro Non Troppo." It is being shown at the Uptown Theater Nov. 9, 9:15 p.m., and the Biograph Nov. 14, 9:15 p.m.

Satirist makes politics fun

by BILL HILL

Whether you call them goofs, gaffes or just plain old bloopers, the foot-in-mouth disease contracted by many American politicians can spell political disaster for them.

On the other hand, they can make your career if you are a political satirist named Mark Russell.

"You've all heard Earl Butz is gone. He's been replaced by Dial-A-Slur."

Audiences roar in approval of Russell's political monologue, which he gives twice nightly, five days a week, at the Shoreham Americana Hotel in Washington, D.C. His success there has gained him a feature interview in Playboy magazine and four or five television shows a year on Public Broadcasting System stations, including Channel 11 in Chicago. He also has a syndicated newspaper column.

No public figure is immune from Russell's act. "Whoever is visible to the public, I include 'em," said the 44-year-old native of Buffalo, N.Y.

But other than his occasional PBS specials and his syndicated newspaper column, Russell's talents remain hidden in Washington, D.C. He is under contract to the Shoreham Americana and, except for a week's appearance in New York during last summer's Democratic National Convention, his act is confined to that one hotel.

Russell used to travel with his act, but he says he now prefers to stay close to the nation's capital. Still, word about him carries almost as fast as the latest Liz Ray joke because of the large number of tourists visiting Washington, D.C.

Updating his act and writing his column keep Russell busy, especially during the current Presidential campaign in which Ford and Carter seem to be working for Russell.

"I think these two jokers are about even. It's like a card game. 'I'll see your ethnic joke and raise you one ethnic purity.'"

Russell says his job is much easier now than when he started his act 20 years ago in a smaller hotel on Capitol Hill because of the close scrutiny of politicians by the media.

"Politicians are much more vulnerable now. It's like they're under a microscope. And it makes it easier for me because I don't have to spend a lot of time setting up a joke. People already know what I'm talking about," he said.

The television debates this fall have also been helpful in furthering the public's understanding of political personalities and issues, Russell said. They, of course, also serve as another source of humor for his performances.

"At the foreign policy debate, Ford wore his Mayaguez tie clip. And Henry Kissinger was found hiding under the podium giving him the answers."

Russell estimates that half his audiences are tourists. The rest are Washington area residents who come back for more. Because of the locals, he must constantly update his act, but there is always something written specially for the visitor to the capital.

"I wonder if they realize how hard we've worked to clean up Washington in this the Bicentennial year. The police are catching hookers by dressing up as Congressmen."

Russell dresses formally, wearing a black tuxedo with a blue ruffled shirt. He used to rely heavily on the piano for livening up his act. But then Watergate happened.

"See the latest story by Woodward and Bernstein — the people who gave us Jerry Ford. I bet if they knew it would lead to this, they would have minded their own business."

For more than two years Russell's act was based almost entirely on the Watergate episodes. "I used to use the piano more and do more chitchat. But during Watergate there was no time for that. I would do two shows a night on just that one subject. If I got off the subject, people became inattentive," he said.

Though Watergate, for the most part, is now gone, other events always seem to come along that serve Russell's purpose.

"There are dry moments, but not for long around here," Russell said. Whether it be Wilbur Mills in the Tidal Basin, Liz Ray in Congressional bedrooms, or Earl Butz telling jokes, there's always something to exploit as Russell makes politics fun.

'Alex and the Gypsy'

A warm, saucy love story

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Review

"Alex and the Gypsy" won't go down in the annuls of movie history. But that won't take away from its present appeal. Warm and subtly romantic, the new release is a takeoff from an old theme — man falls in love, man is jilted but can't help coming to the rescue of the woman he once loved.

Jack Lemmon plays Alexander Main, a bail bondsman in a small California city. He is summoned to the jail by a women with whom he had an affair 10 years previous.

Genevieve Bujold is Maritza, a beautiful, headstrong gypsy who has already confessed to authorities she stabbed her husband, but appeals to Lemmon to bail her out for four final days of freedom before sentencing. The bond is $30,000. Worst of all, Main knows Maritza will skip out on him. He is so sure he doesn't even come to the jail right away. And after the initial confrontation and explosion of bitterness, he vows he will never return. But we know otherwise.

Bail bondsman and gypsy? That's a different sort of pairup. But it works, and how, with Lemmon in the kind of character role he is noted for being able to develop; and Bujold matching that recent rave performance in "Obsession," depicting a kind of irresistible, wild-eyed, free spirit.

Main is a man of scruples. Even so, when he has an opportunity to bail out a man he knows will be killed on the outside by the underworld, he goes ahead, yet not without a powerful scene of mind wrestling. If he doesn't, some other bail bondsman will, he rationalizes.

And though it falls through and the money, too, he bails out Maritza by robbing from his own safe, knowing full well he is ruined financially if he doesn't return her after four days.

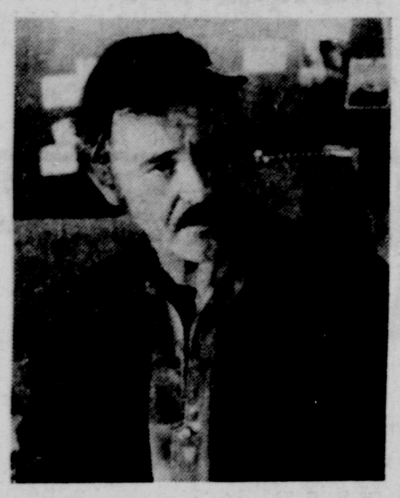

The entire movie is almost made up of those four days following Maritza's release, plus several effective flashbacks explaining the meeting of the two and the weaknesses of their previous relationship.

"You're a lonely man and you're going to die all alone in this big house," Maritza threatens Main. Lemmon who seldom lets down his guard but still is able to express years of quiet sorrow and suffering highlighted by special scenes where a blank-faced Lemmon stares into a flashing, warning signal.

For added humor and an unexpected twist to the ending, there is a third central character, Crainpool (James Wood) a pathetic character who resembles a brow-beaten Bob Cratchit.

There are beautifully photographed scenes — a gypsy funeral, a Greek festival out in the country, and the entire movie is threaded with a warm touch that is aptly rewarded with a hopeful, bright ending.

"Alex and the Gypsy" is based on "The Bailbondsman" by Stanley Elkin. The musical score is by Henry Mancini and it shows. The movie is rated R.

JACK LEMMON plays a bail-bondsman. Alexander Main who dangerously falls in love with one of his clients.

GENEVIEVE BUJOLD is gypsy girl Maritza. Released by 20th Century-Fox, "Alex and the Gypsy" opens today at area theaters.

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments, based on reports of the Independent Film Journal, for selected films of interest to readers.

"The Front" — An entertaining, informative and thoroughly involving comedy-drama about the entertainment industry's infamous "blacklist" of the early 1950s, with Woody Allen outstanding as a none-too-bright cashier catapuled to fame by submitting the scripts of banished TV writers under his own name. Though it's essentially a fantasy — Allen becomes a committed martyr to free speech — the film maximizes both the absurdity and underlying destructiveness of the era to great effect. (PG)

"Burnt Offerings" — Robert Marasco's best-selling gothic potboiler about eerie goings-on at a murderous mansion has been transformed into a silly, unmvolving and drastically overlong movie that seems tailormade for a late-night TV slot. Director Dan Curtis lays on a lot of irrelevant atmosphere, but the storyline and lead performances by Karen Black and Oliver Reed are equally transparent. (PG)

"Marathon Man" — Dustin Hoffman stars as a graduate student dangerously immersed in an international intrigue involving Nazi war criminal Laurence Olivier. The film never really meshes because the plot is just too difficult to understand. Even Hoffman's character is weak. (R).

"Bittersweet Love" — After a couple (Scott Hylands and Meredith Baxter Birney) meet and marry, the girl's mother (Lana Turner) discovers that her son-in-law's father is the man she had an affair with 30 years earlier and is her daughter's real father. Both parents feel they must tell their children the truth. How each person sopes with this situation is the basis of the movie. (PG)

"Great Scott and Cathouse Thursday" — Another trip back to the new Old West where frontier heroes cuss, carouse and cheat each other silly. Lee Marvin and Oliver Reed team against former buddy Robert Culp who made off with their gold years before. A solid cast but a routine script. (PG).

Elegant dining at the top

The elegance that is Hilton gives Northwest suburban residents an opportunity to enjoy tableside flambe as well as more traditional dishes, live entertainment and cozy dining 13 floors atop the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel.

The Top of the Hilton is the perfect spot to celebrate good news or a special occasion over a good bottle of wine, a several-course meal and dancing in a dimly lit and comfortable atmosphere.

The 225-seat dining room opened 11 years ago as the Top of the Towers. The supper club was changed to the

Featuring:
Top of the Hilton

Top of the Hilton when Hilton took over management of the entire hotel complex two years ago December.

The menu has been altered several times since, offering a fine variety of French gourmet and traditional American dishes, catering to both executives who are entertaining out-of-town clients and families wishing to spend a special but still affordable night out.

HANS JASPERS, director of food and beverage for the Top of the Hilton, says the dining room will offer patrons a salad bar beginning next month that will be included in the price of all dinner entrees.

Meals begin with an appealing variety of appetizers that include Shrimp De Jonghe, $2.95, a tender grouping of shrimp sauteed in sherry and baked in a tasty garlic butter sauce on a Coquille shell.

Coquille St. Jacques, $3.25, is a delight of tiny scallops baked in white wine sauce and served on the half shell.

A flavorful French onion soup, $1.25, and the Hilton's black bean soup, $1, offer a warming transition to a delicious Caesar salad for two, a creamy treat prepared at your table for $3.95.

A STARTLING alternative, but just as good, is the wilted spinach salad for two, $3.95, topped with eggs, radishes and a hefty mustard sauce.

The main entrees range from the uncommon grilled Culotte steak, $6.75, of beef slices topped with Bordelaise sauce and vegetables, to the gourmet broiled calves' sweetbreads, $6.95, served on toast points with Canadian bacon and Bordelaise sauce.

The Le Caneton Bigarade, $7.50, is a luscious, crisp Long Island duckling basted in orange glaze sauce and served on a steaming bed of Minesota wild rice.

Parons must request a special list of flaming entrees which include Steak Diane, $11.95, prepared at the table and served in a rich but thin sauce of mushrooms and onions.

ALL ENTREES, including Wiener Schnitzel, $6.75, and Boston scrod, $5.95, are served with crisp greens, a baked potato topped with a tangy sour cream mix, and bread rolls accompanied by a sweet honey butter.

A list of fine wines to complete the meal is extensive, and the desserts range from the simple but delicious strawberry cheese cake, $1.25, to house specialties such as Bananas Foster, $2.95, bana slices flamed in almonds and brandy, and served over vanilla ice cream. Friday night packages for dinner followed by a play at the Arlington Park Theatr are available for $21 per person.

Vocalist John Adair will continue his solo performances at Top of the Hilton through Nov. 20, to be followed by songress Mimi Hines Nov. 26-27, and Liz Damon's Orient Express Nov. 30 through New Year's Eve.

Reservations are advised. A $3 cover charge per person is applied to weekend patrons only.

"ANOTHER VIEW OF PICASSO," a sculpture by Carolyn Gorr, is one of 60 pieces currently being exhibited through Nov. 12 in Countryside Art Center's all member show, the first exhibit in its new gallery at 408 N. Vail. Children's art classes begin at the gallery the week of Nov. 8. Information: 253-3005.

Pentangle completes '76 playbill

Rounding out the year will be Neil Simon's comedy hit, "Barefoot in the Park." Opening Dec. 3 and running for three weekends, the play will feature Nina Leone and Bob Fitzgerald, both of Des Plaines; Sandy Irvin, Palatine; Ken LeTraunik, Schaumburg; Kip McGovern, Arlington Heights, and Bruce Wearier, Elk Grove Village.

These shows will be presented at Limelight Theatre, 1165 Tower Rd., Schaumburg.

Why we put ten people at tables designed for twelve.
A knowledgeable caterer knows that little details can make a big difference in the success of a meeting, banquet or party.
And that's why we consider a table's eating space. Not just seating space. And why, for certain meetings, provide shaved ice in the water pitchers, instead of ice cubes. To cut down on distracting noise.
It's a certain kind of thoughtfulness that makes a big difference.
And we offer it right along with the availability of gourmet foods. Indoor, out-of-the-weather parking for up to 1,100 cars. A variety of meeting rooms for groups as small as 10, as large as 1,850. Besides the prestige, location, and luxurious accommodations of the Hyatt Regency.
So instead of trying to remember hundreds of details for your next affair, just remember one. Our phone number. (312) 565-1000.

Political drama timely

by GENIE CAMPBELL
(A review)

What better time to stage the political strife between two hoeful candidates seeking their party's top nomination than right before a real live Presidential election.

Gore Vidal's "The Best Man," currently playing at Drury Lane Theatre at Water Tower Place, is enjoyable viewing, but on a fictional level. Still, it's good, solid melodrama executed with the best of direction and ensemble acting.

And depending upon your own political alignment on the eve of this election, you might even read something extra into one or the other embattled politicans. That's up to you. But the election is the reason this particular play was chosen at this particular time.

WHILE VIDAL'S outlook on power politics is now 16 years old, its expression of ruthlessness is still very much intact. Regardless, I'd rather see "The Best Man" treated as a period piece, if necessary, than watch an attempt to update it with artificial jabs at topical matters that tend to stick out like pumpkins in a watermelon patch.

Comments like "Don't forget to stay away from ethnic purity" are cheap shots. According to "The Best Man," Mrs. Ford "talks too much" and Pat Nixon "was just right, considering all the agony she had to go through."

Despite these flaws, script director George Keathley does an admirable job in expressing the aristocratic politeness of one political candidate (Don Porter) pitted against the self-made, righteous opponent (James Farentino) who is not above steamrolling everything in his way to attain the White House.

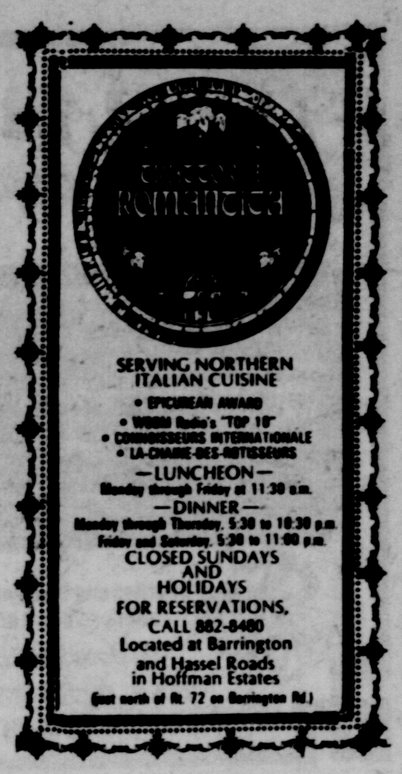

PORTER AND FARENTINO are powerful in their roles, even more so in direct confrontation with each other.

Though it took several scenes for me to discover King Donovan plays an ex-president, he does add a humanizing touch to the office and a dose of good humor now and then.

As usual, in politics, the women remain in supporting roles though Peggy Converse is courageous as the dutiful wife who feels compelled to stand behind her husband though her marriage is no longer meaningful, and Ellen Strasberg is the perfect Southern belle who demonstrates just how fickle she is when she forgets to put on the accent in one scene.

DAVID EMMONS did a terrific job in designing a set that can be revolved with a minimum of work to show two different hotel suites.

Altogether "The Best Man" is the most stimulating live theater yet attempted by the new Drury Lane. But with the passing of the election so does the interest. "The Best Man" is closing two weeks early, Nov. 7.

Many new faces on stage as Chicago Ballet opens

by LYNN ASINOF

(A review)

Like the phoenix, the Chicago Ballet seems to rise from the ashes each year just to prove it can survive.

There were lots of new faces Tuesday when the company opened its expanded 1976-77 season. That's because most of last year's company picked up and moved to Houston following a season of dissension.

But the youthful spirit of the company seems to have survived the bloody transition. That in itself is encouraging in a city where dance fans for years have had to import their ballet.

ALTHOUGH THE faces were different, it is hard to tell what the season holds in store based on Tuesday's performance. For the most part, the company contented itself with easy, lively pieces that showed nice leg extensions and pretty, posed bodies.

The solid dancing of the evening was left to the quest artists, most notably Marianna Tcherkassky, who was recently raised to the rank of principal dancer with the American Ballet Theatre.

Partnered in two pas de deux by the Soviet-trained Japanese dancer Hideo Fukagawa, Tcherkassky had lightness and texture.

She creates the fine tension that characterizes good dance with such minute movements as the dropping of her eyelids or the curve of her fingers.

SHE WAS A joy to watch, even in the tiny chamber theater at 1016 N. Dearborn St. which put her close enough to touch.

Unfortunately, Fukagawa's dancing was not as finely honed, and the two seemed to have difficulty finding balance together, particularly in Bournonville's "Flower Festival at Genzano."

The Japanese dancer fared better in "Le Corsaire" pas de deux where his turns and jumps had both a center and a finished line.

The program for the company included the world premier of "Love, How Many Colors?" a cutesy ballet choreographed to kicky music. It focused on the problem of one girl too many in a world of couples. Choreographed by William Scott of the Dance Theatre of Harlem, the piece was well-practiced but lightweight.

PRINCIPAL DANCER Jordeen Ivano pouted and flirted her way through that number, but started to show her ability in James Clouser's "Con Spirito."

So did Gregory Begley, who executed a series of dead-center turns that ended the piece with style. He was, in fact, the best thing about the piece, which was first presented last year.

Balanchine's dramatic "The Prodigal Son," another repeat from last year, gave Chicago its first glimpse of Gennadi Vostrikov, a wiry blonde who defected from the Moiseyev Ballet in 1970.

Volstrikov commands attention with his jumps and footwork. But more importantly, he has the ability to color his dancing so that neither the suffering or penitence portrayed in the piece are overbearing. Overacting could be tragic on the theater's tiny stage.

OTHERS IN THE company hold promise. Cynthia Ann Roses, one of the few who returned from last year's troup, is developing a lovely stage personality. Bruce Steivel, a transplant from the Houston ballet, showed some neat footwork in "Con Spirito."

The new directing partnership between Ruth Page and Frederick Franklin once again seems to promise that Chicago may one day have its own fine ballet company.

They say the current program, which runs through Sunday, is just the beginning. Maybe this time they'll be right.

MASTER PUPPETEER David Syrotiak of the National Marionette Theatre presents "Art of the Puppeteer" Tuesday, Nov. 9, at 8 p.m. in the Harper College Center Lounge, Palatine. The show is geared to an adult audience, which the Marionette Theatre is striving to develop. Admission is $1 public, free to Harper students.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Coffee stimulates extra heartbeats

I read your column about the lady who had paroxysmal tachycardia. I have it, too, and I'm 34 years old and a mother of two. I felt just as bad as she did until I quit drinking coffee and all kinds of caffeine.

Even though I only drank two cups of coffee, I guess my heart just couldn't handle any kind of caffeine anymore.

Since I have stopped I feel just great and feel like I am born again. If she would try that, it could make all the difference to her.

I have mentioned several times in this column that coffee can stimulate extra beats of the heart, blip-flops and other problems of irregularity of the heart, as regular readers know.

Your letter makes an important point. Some people are more sensitive to caffeine than others. One or two cups of coffee have little effect at all on some people. Other people are not so lucky.

Yes, anyone who has irregularity of the heart should avoid coffee, tea, colas, chocolate and cocoa. Also they should avoid anything that causes indigestion or acid stomach. Cigarets should also be avoided. All of these can cause susceptible people to have attacks.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias for your information. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

My boyfriend gets herpes on the inside of his lip quite frequently and they really bother him. I was wondering if you could tell me what causes these and if there is any treatment for them.

Just to keep everyone from being confused about herpes there are two kinds of herpes: herpes simplex and herpes zoster. The latter is associated with shingles and related to the chickenpox virus.

Herpes simplex, which your boyfriend has, exists in two types, Type I and Type II. As one of my colleagues states, Type I is usually found above the waist and Type II is found below the waist. Type II is the type commonly mentioned as a "venereal disease," because it can be transmitted that way. That is not the only way it can be transmitted though.

I am sorry to say the treatment for herpes simplex of the lip, particularly inside the mouth, is less than satisfactory. I would suggest that he keep his mouth as clean as possible when he has an infection. Do this by using frequent mouthwashes of lightly salted water — about one-half teaspoon in a glass of water. Or he can make a solution of half Cepacol (a mouthwash) and half water and use that.

In addition he can take antibiotics to prevent secondary bacterial infections. The herpes virus itself is not affected by antibiotics.

Herpes outside the mouth can be treated with a mild drying agent, such as 70 per cent alcohol, during the blister stage. When the crusted scab-like lesion develops, he can use a lubricant such a petroleum jelly over it to keep it soft.

Most germs succumb to fresh air and sun

Dear Dorothy: Ever since our college days, we've been avid book collectors. We browse through all the old book stores looking for "finds." Never gave a thought to it until a dear friend asked if we ever concerned ourselves about contacting some disease. Has this question ever arisen with you? — Priscilla Raymond

Years ago. Found that fresh air and sunlight disposes of most germs. The one thing that came out of the research was that one needs to examine old books to make sure they're intact. Silverfish love glue, paste and starch and when they get into books, ruin them. But if you get an intact book, a little airing will remove all danger and you can go back, unworried, to your prowling.

Dear Dorothy: I inherited two pairs of fiberglass draperies from a relative. They are several inches too long. Can this type of material be cut with a regular scissors? Are there any particular rules to follow regarding the hem? — Mrs. Grace Leggett

Yes, you can cut this material with regular scissors, although a long sharp pair will make it easier. A six-inch hem is right and you will have better luck using nylon thread. Fiberglass has a tendency to pucker up when cotton thread is used.

Dear Dorothy: You've had several inquiries on how to store ginger root and my experience may be helpful. I've found the best way is to cut it into about two-inch chunks, wrap tightly in foil, put into a covered glass jar, then freeze it. It will keep for years. When you want some, take out as much as you want, but do not let it thaw completely before slicing it. In fact, I find it simple to shave with a sharp knife while it's still frozen. — Helen M. Petrie

Ask Andy

Spanish brought horses to U.S.

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Jim Schnabl, 11, of Mukwonago, Wis., for his question:

WHO BROUGHT THE HORSE TO THE UNITED STATES?

Where horses oirginated no one knows for certain. Fossil remains show that during the Ice Age horses lived on every continent except Australia. As recently as 10,000 years ago, great herds wandered through North and South America. Then, for some mysterious reason, they disappeared from the Western Hemisphere until European explorers reintroduce them in the 16th century.

When Hernando de Soto, the great Spanish explorer who discovered the Mississippi River, reached Arkansas, he met some Indians he considered friendly. At the time he had with him a herd of pigs, a pack of dogs and 213 horses used both as riding and pack animals. In a generous gesture, he gave the Indians a few pigs, stallions and mares, making the prairie Indians the first owners of horses.

Spanish explorers, led by Hernando Cortes, brought the first Andalusian horses to Mexico in 1519. Their power and bearing frightened the Mexican Indians, who had never set eyes on a horse before. When the Spanish conquerors left Mexico, some of these horses were left behind, and probably became the ancestors of the American wild horses which roamed the plains of the West.

Indians fortunate enough to own horses loved them and took great pride in them. To own a horse meant great status and provided mobility in hunting and warfare. Many Indian victories were directly due to the supremacy of the horses of the warriors.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Mary Schiavone, 12, of Prospect Heights, Ill., for her question:

CAN THE OCEAN BE FARMED FOR FOOD?

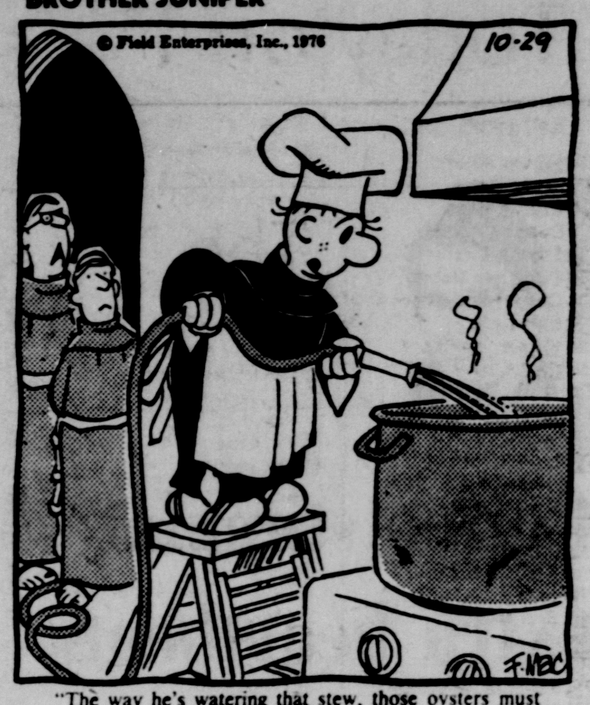

More than 100 years ago Jules Verne wrote "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." In this early science fiction classic, Captain Nemo cruises beneath the oceans in a submarine, living off the bounty of the watery underworld. Every conceivable type of food decked his table, from crisp salads made from plants to succulent meats, creamy soups, sweeteners, spices and starches. Although once considered improbable, this oceanic larder is a distinct possibility in the future, according to experts in the marine sciences.

Today, the oceans provide numerous foods, including abalone, halibut, salmon, shrimp and tuna. Although the current cultivation of marine foods will not feed vast numbers of people, encouraging advances are just around the corner. Oceanographic expeditions reveal a frontier with much the same sorts of challenges that once faced the early pioneers. Properly developed, yes, the ocean can be farmed for food. But success will depend on man's scrupulous efforts to eliminate pollutants, and the ability of all nations to work together.

Barney Miller tries an animal act

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI)—When Hal Linden first was approached about doing an animal show for kids on Sunday mornings, he received the idea with all the enthusiasm that Barney Miller would reserve for fleas in the detectives squad room.

"My first response was no," Linden said in an interview, discussing "Animals, Animals, Animals," the Sunday morning animal show with the magazine format that he narrates for ABC.

"It seemed to me like a moderately standard show, just an extension of the ones about such-and-such species and how they hunt foxes, who hunt jackals, who hunt rabbits, and so on along the chain of life. It seemed like the same old thing with the host standing on front of a map and I didn't want to get involved."

THEN HE SAW a sample show on the horse and was won over, particularly when he realized he would have the opportunity to go down to the San Diego Zoo and actually work with the animals, and develop what he called "a nice off-handed sense of humor about the whole thing."

Linden has four reasons for being interested — four children ranging in age from 9 to 16 years old.

"As a parent, I've been quite concerned about what's on television. I haven't been too thrilled with children's television. I only wish this show had more viewership, but everybody's either in church or at a ballgame."

Linden hosts "Animals, Animals, Animals" almost in his spare time. Most of his attention remains fixed on running the detectives' squad in "Barney Miller."

Linden, who began his career on Broadway in musical comedy roles, keeps up his singing on television guest appearances and has developed a night club act that's heavy on the musical chores.

Is Linden tiring of Barney Miller? "I love doing him," the actor said. which is just as well since he has three more years to go on his "Barney Miller" contract. Even then, he'd like to continue the character — but perhaps at a better price.

Silly convention wins top

The unlucky expert looked so happy that we knew he had another real hard luck story for us.

He had been playing duplicate and showed us today's hand.

He pointed out that practically every South player opened with four spades and played it there. Sometimes it was doubled by West. In all cases West opened an ace — usually the diamond. Then he would proceed to cash his other two aces and would note that his partner would play the three of hearts, deuce of diamonds and 10 of clubs. Then West would lead a second club and a ruff would set the contract.

"What happened to you?" we asked. "Did West double you and then give his partner two clubs ruffs?"

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

"No.!" he replied. "I sat West. It seems North and South were playing a silly convention that an opening bid of three notrump showed a seven or eight-card solid suit and nothing on the side. South opened three notrump. Everyone passed and South made four notrump for an absolute top."

As our friend said, it is a silly convention, but everything works once in a while.

Gianapulos

One would never guess he is one of the village's most vocal and dedicated advocates of elderly rights because he is 20 years younger than those he tries to help.

But that doesn't stop John W. Gianopulos from completing what he calls his mission.

"Giving the elderly a gold watch and a party at age 65 and telling them they can no longer be part of the mainstream of society is the 'kiss of death,'" he said.

"The effects of involuntary idleness are traumatic. One day a person is 'chief cook' and the next day he's 'bottle washer.' I think we have a mission to preserve the health and dignity of seniors."

GIANOPULOS, a professor at Truman College in Chicago, is chairman of Arlington Heights' senior citizens' commission and long considered an expert and activist for elderly rights.

His work at helping set up off-campus classes for the elderly at Truman led to invitations from former President Richard M. Nixon and former Illinois Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie to attend national and state conferences on aging in 1971.

His personal goal is to wipe out "age-ism," a word he coined to describe prejudice against the elderly.

"The average Social Security check for an elderly couple is $310 a month," he said. "In a community like Arlington Heights that will do little more than pay the rent and buy a few groceries, if that much.

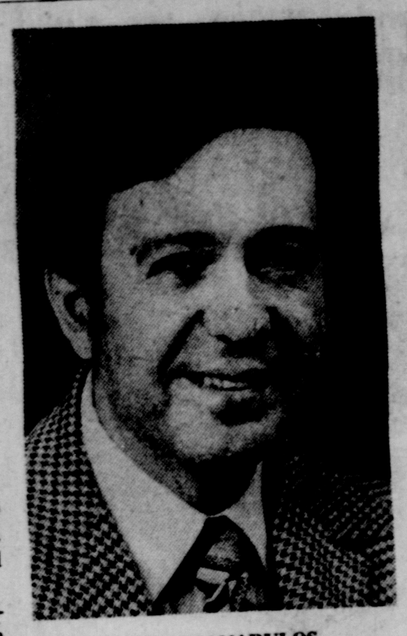

"The elderly population here has increased by one-third in the past several years to 4,000 and if present population trends continue, those over 65 will account for 20 per cent of the nation's population by the year 2000

"THAT'S A SIGNIFICANT block," Gianopulos said, "yet they're not organized. Because it's usually the squeaky wheel that gets the grease, we're trying to make a little noise on their behalf."

Since the senior citizens' commission was formed in 1972, it has initiated a meals-on-wheels program, a village-subsidized taxi service and a federal housing project for the elderly.

Gianopulos admits his motives are not entirely unselfish.

"Tomorrow our own children will be wondering what to do for us," he said. "If we make the way a little easier for our parents and grandparents now, it will be that much easier for us to take care of ourselves later."

JOHN GIANAPULOS

Graham

When Kathryn Graham volunteers as a board or committee member, she's not just satisfying her interest in civic affairs. She's carrying on a 200-year-old family tradition.

"My family settled in Illinois seven generations ago," she said, "and we've been active ever since."

One of her great grandfathers was the first sheriff of Bureau County in North Central Illinois. Another traveled with Abraham Lincoln during his Presidential campaign.

And her father, Josef T. Skinner, was a criminal lawyer, a Democratic committeeman and state's attorney three times.

MRS. GRAHAM got her first taste of political work as a child, when after grammar school she traced plats for 10 cents each in her father's office.

"My father would drag me along to all the meetings," she said. "One of my first memories is of sitting on the lap of the Bureau County judge as a toddler. I guess I've been sitting on bandwagons ever since I was knee high."

That political background led her to volunteer for a position on the Arlington Heights Park Board in 1973. With that job comes a seat on the plan commission and the citizens' action committee against flooding.

"For me it was a hardship not to be active all the years I was being a suburban housewife," she said. "I applied for a park board position after I finally got tired of sitting in women's meetings and talking about what should be done, but never doing it.

"I guess it never occurs to some people that they can do something about what's wrong," she said. "They don't realize it takes very little more effort to get things done than it does to talk about doing them."

Zimmanck

"I was sitting next to a man at a dinner party 12 years ago," Mae Zimmanck remembers, "and all I could think to say to him was, 'Do you have to blow your nose or go to the potty?'

"It was then I knew it was time to get out of the house."

Since then, beginning with the presidency of a Parent Teachers' Assn., she has become a fixture at village board meetings, a full-time volunteer and a leader of civic change.

SHE SPENDS DOZENS of hours every week at meetings and on the phone organizing, cajoling and usually convincing citizens to join her in whatever campaign is dominating her life at the time.

But she has never run for office.

"I never take on anything I don't feel I can do well and when you run for office you often have to involve yourself in things you're not interested in.

"By volunteering," she said, "I can limit myself to things about which I have a deep feeling."

Her concerns are not only deep, but broad. She is president of the Arlington Beautification Council, on the Neighborhood Watch Program's board of directors, chairman of the zero vandalism committee, board member of the Prospect High School parents' group and an election judge. She also volunteers on Mondays at Northwest Community Hospital.

How does she accomplish so much?

"I'M VERY ORGANIZED. I have different briefcases for each of the organizations with which I'm involved. And every night before I go to sleep I plot out how to best spend the next day. You know what they say, if you want something done, ask a busy person."

And she accomplishes all this despite what some — herself not included — would consider a handicap.

She has an illness she says "they don't have a name for yet" that causes blood clots. It has resulted in 15 operations in six years and three partial leg amputations.

She faces even that setback with characteristic optimism. "Perhaps it has given me some of my energy to push. It's made me realize that as long as you're here, you might as well make your mark."

Montgomery paintings

Portraits by nationally known painter Eugene A. Montgomery will be exhibited at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library Monday through Nov. 30.

His subjects include university chancellors and corporation presidents. He has also painted religious and historical murals.

Cawley

the Surrey Ridge West Homeowners' Assn., is used to worrying about Arlington Heights, but he is equally accustomed to trying to do something about ensuring its future.

He spends several hours each week attending meetings and making long-distance calls to legislators at his own expense. Such calls helped speed up this week's transfer of the former Nike Base to the park district.

He said he would consider running for village trustee next year, but he is more interested in preserving what he called the "integrity" of the village than having a title before his name.

"The most serious problem in the village today is comprehensive zoning," Cawley said. "The tax base has to be expanded and we have to attract corporations here, but companies aren't going to build corporate headquarters next to a fast-food chain.

"We have the choice of becoming something like Oak Brook or getting junk."

HIS HOMEOWNERS' association has been successful, he said, because its members are realistic.

"Sometimes if you can force a problem to public attention you can get people to compromise," Cawley said.

"Many other civic associations haven't been as successful as ours because they refuse to do that. They don't realize the problems in governing a village because they aren't realistic. I think I am."

Muller

is helping Girl Scout leaders evaluate the effectiveness of their training.

AND SHE HAS BECOME something of an expert on volunteering.

"The League (of Women Voters) was fantastic schooling for effective volunteering," she said. "Just putting in time on a committee or board can be meaningless. You can waste your time volunteering if you don't do it right."

Part of "doing it right," according to Mrs. Muller, is thinking of oneself as a public servant, not a public official.

"The whole idea of public service is to help citizens become as knowledgeable as you are," she said. "One of the reasons for citizen apathy is that people who run for office put themselves on a pedestal. And citizens find it difficult to participate because they think those who run for office are smarter than they are and that's not true."

MRS. MULLER said she has spent as much as eight to 10 hours a day attending meetings and organizing committees by phone.

"What disturbs me is people who have momentary involvement," she said. "They have a tendency, when they stop heavy involvement, to say, 'I've done it all' and not help others who still participate.

"It's a shame we don't have some sort of talent bank in Arlington Heights," she said. "It's terribly important to share information."

Four radial tires stolen from car

Thieves piled bricks beneath a 1976 auto, let the air out from its four radial tires and stole the tires and wheels in Elk Grove Village Wednesday afternoon, police reported.

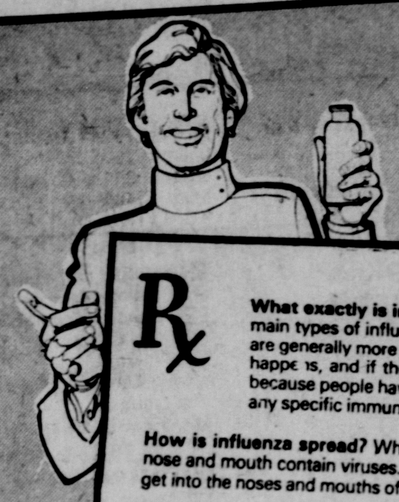

Police said the thieves took tires and wheels valued at $400 from a car parked at 2050 Devon Ave. between 1:45 and 3:30 p.m. The name of the victim was not released.

$1,725 in stereo equipment stolen

Des Plaines police are investigating the theft of $1,725 in stereo equipment from the residence of Kathi Lumbert, 22, of 3010 Orchard Place Rd.

Police reported that thieves broke the lock on the home to gain entry.

Taken in the theft Wednesday were a Banze white guitar, an autoharp, an Akai reel-to-reel tape deck, a stereo phonograph-radio receiver, two speakers and a stereo receiver.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT INFLUENZA

What exactly is influenza? Influenza is a respiratory disease caused by a virus. There are two main types of influenza virus — A and B. Each type includes various strains. Type A epidemics are generally more frequent and severe. From time to time, new virus strains develop. When this happens, and if the strains are quite different from previous ones, they may cause epidemics because people have not had any previous exposure to them and consequently have not built up any specific immunity against them.

How is influenza spread? When a person has influenza, or is just coming down with it, the fluids in his nose and mouth contain viruses. They are expelled into the air when he sneezes, coughs or talks. Then they get into the noses and mouths of other people and cause disease in the susceptibles.

How serious a disease is influenza? For most people, influenza is a moderately severe illness but not a serious health threat. Complete recovery can be expected within a week. For certain high risk groups it is a serious problem and the disease or its complication may be life-threatening.

What are the symptoms of influenza? Symptoms of influenza often come on suddenly and may include some or all of the following: fever, chills, headache, dry cough and soreness and aching in the back and the limbs. Fever seldom lasts more than several days, although the patient may continue to feel weakened for several days to a week or more.

Does one strain of flu cause more serious illness than others? Influenza illnesses vary from very mild to very severe and fatal. The strain of virus appears to be less important in this regard than the response of the patient to the infection. In general, type A viruses cause more severe epidemics than type B.

Is there a treatment for swine influenza? As with other strains of influenza, there is no specific treatment. Science has, however, given us the ability to significantly blunt the impact of this disease. Vaccines — not available in 1918 — are now an effective way to prevent the disease. Antibiotics, also unavailable in 1918, are important in treating the complications of influenza and thus reducing fatalities.

What can I do for protection if I am allergic to eggs? First, check with a physician to be certain that the allergy is the type that would prevent you from being immunized. However, even if you cannot take the flu vaccine, you will get some benefit from the mass vaccination program. This is so because you will be living in a protected population and therefore will be less likely to be exposed to the disease.

Can I get swine flu from eating pork? No. Influenza is spread from person-to-person. When a person has influenza, or is just coming down with it, the fluids in his nose and mouth contain viruses. They are expelled into the air when he sneezes, coughs or talks. Then they get in the noses and mouths of other people and cause disease.

How can we immunize more than 200 million Americans? Essentially the plan relies on the federal government for its purchasing power, technical leadership and coordination; on state and local health agencies for their experience in conducting systematic immunization programs; and on the private health care sector for its extensive medical and other health-related resources.

How effective will the new influenza vaccine be? It is generally believed that effectiveness of today's flu vaccine ranges somewhere between 70-90%. When a distinctive new strain comes along, scientists are now generally able to match a vaccine to the new strain, and it is likely that a high degree of effectiveness could be achieved in a vaccine against the swine virus.

Will the influenza vaccine make me ill? In general, influenza vaccines of recent years have been less likely to cause illness than earlier vaccines. In the past, a small percentage of people who have been vaccinated against the flu have run slight fevers within 24 hours after receiving the vaccination. About 1 percent have run temperatures over 100 degrees. Swelling, redness and tenderness in the arm occur in 20 to 40 percent of those vaccinated. Severe reactions are very rare.

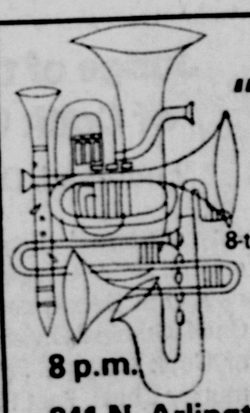

Can I get flu from the vaccine? The flu vaccine contains a virus that has been killed. No one will get flu from taking the vaccine. Because the virus used in making the vaccine is grown in eggs, people who are highly allergic to eggs should not take it.

In addition, Mikva's support for an amendment to the federal Supplemental Security Income Program to provide benefits for crippled children won praise from Dr. Merrit B. Play begins in state tennis meet

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Tennis Editor

It is over for Oak Park-River Forest but it may just be beginning for Hinsdale Central.

The Red Devils, for so long the kingpins of boys' tennis in Illinois, may step up to take over the girls' share of the sport at the Illinois state tournament today and Saturday at Arlington and other Dist. 214 schools.

Play will begin today at 9 a.m. at Arlington, Prospect, Hersey, Forest View and Rolling Meadows High Schools.

THE FINAL three rounds will begin Saturday at 9 a.m. at Arlington.

This is only the fifth year of the girls' tournament and Oak Park has won all four previous state titles.

But the Huskies only advanced one singles player, senior Mary Ann Nelson, through the district won by Hinsdale and the Red Devils seem poised to start a nice string of their own.

"I've heard people say we could be a dynasty," commented Hinsdale coach Mary Ann Erickson, "but I'm reluctant to agree.

"WE HAVE A young team, which will help us in the future, but you never know what will happen in the state tournament.

"I'll admit we do have a good chance this year."

Hinsdale placed singles player Betsy Heidler and the doubles tandems of Nancy Nyquist and Sue Whitney and Mindy Cushing and Lucia Wetmore in the finals.

Nyquist, a senior, and Whitney, a freshman, are the top doubles seed ahead of Rich East's Patty Groth and Jill Anderson.

"Both Nancy and Sue are strong doubles and singles players," Erickson said.

NYQUIST REACHED the singles quarterfinals as a freshman, the semifinals as a sophomore and then missed her junior season with a broken collarbone.

Whitney, a transfer from Connecticut, is ranked 21st in the nation with another doubles partner and is in the top 25 in the nation as a singles player in her age division.

Heidler, a junior, is seeded sixth in the singles and Erickson is confident she is better than that ranking.

The key to Hinsdale's hopes, though, may rest with freshmen Cushing and Wetmore.

ERICKSON SAID, "They're important to us. They could get us some extra points but, because they're freshmen, we haven't been putting too much pressure on them because the last thing we want is for them to clutch."

The argument for the team title will not be without drama, though, with the presence of New Trier East and Crystal Lake.

New Trier East is at a disadvantage, advancing only a pair of doubles teams to state.

Senior Stephanie Frei and sophomore Betsy Stogin are seeded fourth. Freshman Juliet Naft and junior Sally Solberg are the other New Trier entries.

"WE HAVE BEATEN Oak Park and Hinsdale this year," said New Trier East coach Mary Jo Herzog, "but I think Hinsdale will win this week simply because we had to come through a tougher district."

Crystal Lake put singles players Katie Waters and Amy Williams and the doubles team of Sandy Dunning and Tammy Kurtz in the finals.

Williams is seeded eighth in the state.

The battle for the singles championship will be wide open after the graduation of Oak Park's Suzie Replogle, winner of three of the last four state championships.

THE PRE-TOURNAMENT favorite is New Trier West's Colette Bennett, a senior who dropped a semifinal match to Replogle last year.

Bennett has whipped all comers this year and been seeded No. 1 but her coach, Vivian Frazier, is keeping her under wraps as much as possible.

"We'd just as soon not advertise," she dodged.

One of the most interesting players in the tournament may be Watseka's Gayathrie DeSilva, the No. 2 seeded singles player.

A FOREIGN EXCHANGE student from Ceylon and the top player in her native country, DeSilva is unbeaten this year but largely a question mark to her competition.

"We really don't know how good she is," Erickson said. "She hasn't lost but then we don't know the type of competition she has been playing at Watseka."

The No. 3 seeded singles player is Sue Jaeger of Stevenson, who won the singles title in the stiff Glenbrook North district last week.

There is a good chance the doubles champions will be sisters. Six sister tandems advanced to the finals and the siblings with the best chances seem to be Lake Forest's Corrine and Victoria Nevinny and Oak Lawn's Sharon and Sandy Burgess.

THE HOST ARLINGTON Cardinals will field a pair of doubles teams in Laura Sanders and Kim Broderick and Kris Richey and Janet Haberkorn.

Joan Rezny of Prospect won the singles title at the Prospect District to advance to hte finals.

Pieces come together in North's puzzle

Three schools seek title; Fremd journeys to Hersey

SPRINGFIELD bound. Harper all-conference golf pick Mike Fitton gets in some practice swings in preparation for the Region IV Tournament in Springfield this weekend. Fitton and teammates Steve Spielmann and Dave Nelson all earned NC4 all-star recognition and will be trying to help the Hawks gain a berth in the junior college national championships next spring. See story on page 9.

by KEITH REINHARD

No, it isn't a Chinese jigsaw puzzle.

In fact, as far as Joe Gliwa is concerned, it isn't very much at all.

Whatever it is, it could make for an interesting weekend of wrapup football in the Mid-Suburban's North Division, beginning tonight at approximately 8:00.

FOR ABOUT TWO hours, on their own field, the Huskies could end all of it. . . the speculation, computation and anticipation.

Or. . . they could leave it hanging right up there in the ozone. . . until Saturday, at Buffalo Grove, when Arlington would have the opportunity to cap it all, one way or another.

What's at stake is the divisional crown, a piece of hardware which has been attracting dust in a Hersey showcase since 1971. The Huskies are in first place now too, and plan on remaining there if Gliwa has anything to say about it.

Fremd's head man, Joe Samojedny, has other things to say, and hopefully, for his Vikings to do tonight when they visit the Huskie den.

What the big talk about is statistics. They could play a part in the outcome of the North title chase concluding this weekend. It's important because a berth in the state playoffs is at stake.

If Hersey (4-0 in the division) wins this evening, the race is all over.

If Fremd (3-1) triumphs tonight and Buffalo Grove (3-1) loses tomorrow, the Vikes get the nod by virture of their head-to-head win over the Huskies.

BUT IF Fremd and Buffalo Grove both win, the championship depends on a pair of numbers: 192 and 20. The amount of yards accrued in the big showdown on the Huskie field today will dictate a winner among three clubs finishing with 4-1 slates.

In the case of this three-way tie, the decision for Samojedny's outfit will hinge upon its collecting 192 yards or more of total offense while limiting their foe to at least 20 yards less. If the gap is smaller, they lose the title to Hersey. If the gap is there but the yoysl ystfd aren't, they yield to the Bison.

BISON PILOT Grant Blaney would like to get a few words in too but his time may or may not come on Saturday.

About the monumental importance of these statistics, Samojedny had to

That's a real shame, New York

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

Pardon me while I gloat.

If you're tired of having the city of New York shoved at you in the sports media, you must have enjoyed recent events.

In a matter of hours last week New York lost Julius Erving, possibly the No. 1 talent and gate attraction in pro basketball, and the World Series.

Don't talk to New Yorkers about Thursday, Oct. 21, 1976.

ERVING JUMPED to Philadelphia, and it still boggles the mind that a New York franchise let him jump.

The Yankees were embarrassed in the World Series and although most cities would be happy just to get there, New York folks, with visions of Yankee dynasties dancing in their heads, don't subscribe to any No. 2 theory. They want to be No. 1 in everything.

For years, of course, the Series was strictly a New York attraction.

And they never — ever — wanted to be embarrassed, particularly by a city called Cincinnati.

LAST SUNDAY the hapless Jets and Giants, New York's professional (term is used loosely) football teams, did not score. They now are a snappy 1-13 for the season, and the Giants had to fire their coach.

Joe Willie Namath is just another quarterback, a rather pathetic figure on a very pathetic team.

They're calling the New York Rangers the Strangers, a hockey team of disbelief and defeat, and the New York Knicks have been gambling — and losing — with player talent in the NBA.

It's interesting how this has developed through the years, the peaks and valleys.

YOU HAD A TIME when the Yankees, New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers were dominating baseball, and then the football Giants gained the headlines. You read so many stories about Y. A. Tittle and Sam Huff and Frank Gifford that it was surprising to learn there were several hundred other people in the National Football League.

New York really started to ride high in 1969 with the Mets' surge to the baseball championship, the Jets' and Joe Willie's "I believe" Super Bowl conquest, and the Knicks' NBA title. The entire city went nuts.

New York was having fun, and they didn't let you forget it.

Those six-million books that came out on the Knicks and the Mets are gathering dust today. It was so ridiculous at the time that practically every author and player in the city produced a book on the two teams — and practically every book was published.

THE YEAR THE JETS won the Super Bowl was just as bad. Players were hawking hair lotions, beer and writing day-by-day, minute-by-minute accounts of the season and the Super Bowl. They were touting Joe Willie for president.

The city was bragging. There is a ridiculous parallel between athletic success and civic success: that because a city has excellent sports teams, it is an excellent city.

That is just as ridiculous as rating colleges strictly by their football teams.

This is nothing personal against New York or its citizens, at least most of its citizens. If you can dodge the muggers, the city remains unrivaled for entertainment and excitement.

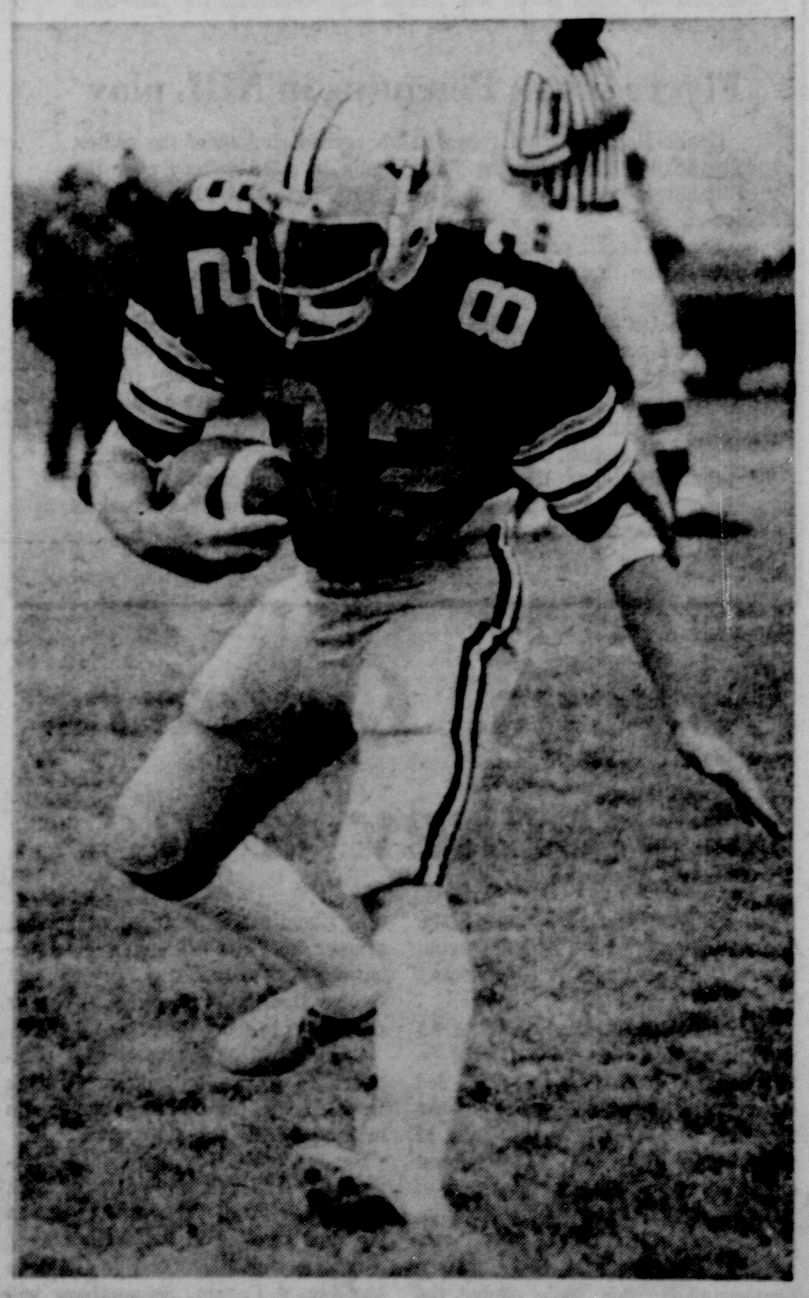

BUT IT IS TIRESOME to hear New Yorkers, basically those who call themselves sporting journalists, proclaim that the city is the center of the sports universe. If a game isn't played in New York or by a New York team, then they feel it doesn't matter.

Headquarters for the television networks, national advertising companies and publishing houses all are located in New York, and the executives there obviously are so involved with the situation that they feel the entire nation must care about New York sports.

Sorry, guys, but the entire nation does not care about New York sports.

It is very reassuring to Chicago fans, long accustomed to suffering, and other residents of the great wilderness beyond the Hudson River that these are difficult days in New York and environs.

Move over, New York. Now you know how it feels.

KEVIN KRISTICK, one of Harper's leading receivers, will be on display with the rest of the nationally-ranked Hawks Saturday when they travel to Concordia College in Milwaukee for a nonconference game.

League office fines Hawks over lockout

MONTREAL — National Hockey League President Clarence Campbell fined the Chicago Black Hawks $500 Thursday for refusing to allow members of the media into the club's dressing room following a game against the New York Islanders Oct. 9 in the Nassau Coliseum.

Campbell said the penalty was imposed under a new regulation requiring clubs to permit members of the press to interview players and team officials within 10 minutes of the end of any game.

"The bylaw provides no escape for any club regardless of what justification or excuse may be offered," Campbell said, adding that a second offense by the Hawks would result in the fine being doubled.

He said the incident occurred on the day of the "outburst" between the Hawks and the Boston Bruins over compensation to be paid the Bruins for the loss of superstar Bobby Orr, who signed with the Hawks.

"The Chicago club was fearful, apparently, that some effort would be made to serve Orr with a restraining order, and that's why they barred everybody from the dressing room."

Campbell said he imposed the fine after receiving a flood of complaints from the media.

The Chicago and Boston clubs have since agreed to negotiate a solution to the compensation issue.

Munson unanimous on UPI all-stars

NEW YORK — Thurman Munson, the New York Yankees' angry catcher, is the only unanimous choice on the 1976 UPI American League All-Star team.

Munson, whose feelings are easily bruised by what he considers a constant lack of recognition, was named on all 26 ballots cast by a panel of UPI baseball correspondents in the annual post-season survey.

Named to the team along with Munson were first baseman Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins, second baseman Bobby Grich of the Baltimore Orioles, shortstop Bert Campaneris of the Oakland A's, third baseman George Brett of the Kansas City Royals and outfielders Mickey Rivers of the Yankees, Ron LeFlore of the Detroit Tigers and Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox.

Also chosen were designated hitter Hal McRae of the Royals, starting pitchers Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles and Mark Fidrych of the Tigers and relief pitcher Bill Campbell of the Twins.

Brother to get Bench's Series car

NEW YORK — Johnny Bench, star catcher of the two-time world champion Cincinnati Reds, received a new Ford Thunderbird today from Sport Magazine for being named the most valuable player in the World Series and said he would give it to his brother.

"My brother's car was stolen last week in Houston," said Bench. "Why anyone would want to steal that beatup thing is beyond me, but I'll give him this one. If he doesn't want it, I'll give him a new one."

The 28-year-old Bench, who hit .533 in the World Series with two homers after a dismal .234 regular season average, said he was surprised the Reds took only four games to defeat the New York Yankees in the Series because he didn't feel his team played all that well.

"I was surprised we hit their pitching so well," Bench admitted. "We hit .313 which tied a record for four games, and they have a strong pitching staff. Frankly, though, I didn't feel from a professional standpoint we played as well as we're capable of playing.

"People who see us play a lot would tell you we made some mistakes in the field that we never make when we're playing at our best. We made some mistakes in the field I couldn't believe. But we're good at applying the pressure and forcing the other team into mistakes."

Celts take 3rd in row; Cavs win

The Boston Celtics, led by Charlie Scott's 31 points, ran their season's record to 3-0 with a 112-105 victory over Buffalo in the NBA Thursday night.

The Celts placed six players in double figures. In addition to Scott's 31 points, Jo Jo White had 17, Kevin Stacom 16, Sidney Wicks and Dave Cowens 13, and Curtis Rowe 12.

Don Adams led the Braves, now 2-2, with 26 points. Buffalo was playing without all-pro center Bob McAdoo, who is recovering from a back injury.

Bobby Smith poured in 23 points and pulled down 10 rebounds as the Cleveland Cavaliers breezed to their third straight victory with a 114-90 decision over the previously undefeated New York Knicks.

After the teams battled to a 26-26 standoff in the first period, the Cavs outscored the Knicks 13-3 in the first six minutes of the second period and hit a sizzling 13 of 21 from the field to grab a 57-43 halftime lead. Smith and Austin Carr combined for 16 second quarter points.

Flyers blank Penguins in NHL play

Goalie Bernie Parent recorded his second shutout of the season Thursday night in leading Philadelphia to a 3-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins for the Flyers' fifth straight victory on home ice.

Reggie Leach scored an unassisted goal with a 30-foot shot at 9:56 in the first period. Mel Bridgman got his fourth goal of the season early in the second period and Bobby Clarke scored his first goal of the season with 1:02 remaining in the same period.

Second-period goals by Jerry Hart, Clarke Gillies and Jean Potvin paced the New York Islanders to a 5-2 victory over the St. Louis Blues Thursday night in a National Hockey League game.

A crowd of 14,524 saw Hart touch off the outburst with his first goal of the season, unassisted after only 23 seconds of the period.

Bob Neely and Darryl Sittler scored second period goals for Toronto Thursday night to help the Maple Leafs break a streak of seven games without a win, beating the Detroit Red Wings 3-1.

Saxons, Cougars in hockey wins

The Schaumburg Saxons and the Conant Cougars posted opening round sub-sectional victories in field hockey Thursday.

Schaumburg hiked its record to 9-5 with a 3-0 win over Elgin Larkin on the Saxons' field. Diane DeWolf led the winners with three goals, scoring the first in the opening minute of play. Cathi Anderson assisted on each.

Conant "completely dominated the game, but just couldn't score," according to Coach Caren Betts. Only a breakaway by Bev Bidlo dented the Oak Park-River Forest net.

"MY DEFENSE played exceptionally well," said Betts, adding that Claudia Kuzyk deserved special praise. On offense doing a good job besides Bev were Kathy Surnicki and Denise Doering. "We were probably so anxious to score that we couldn't."

Conant had 30 shots on goal compared to just a half dozen by Oak Park. It was the Cougars' eighth win in 12 tries.

Saxon coach Kay Winkelhake singled out the defensive work of Beth Arden and Faith Peterson as weel as the goal keeping of Liz Walker.

Conant will meet Chicago Latin on Monday at Conant. Schaumburg will play the winner of the Barrington-Maine East game on Thursday at Elgin Larkin.

Soccer report

Four area teams in triumphs

Four area soccer teams opened with victories Thursday as preliminary games were staged in the Illinois High School Assn. Boys State Tournament.

Play resumes Saturday for the quarterfinal round with the semifinals Nov. 2 and sectional championship Nov. 6 at designated sites.

In action Thursday Mid-Suburban League champion Fremd went to penalty kicks to turn back Barrington, 3-2. Forest View meanwhile turned back Prospect, 4-1, Elk Grove throttled East Leyden, 4-2, and Stevenson stopped Waukegan West, 3-1.

OTHER LOCAL squads were not as fortunate. Rolling Meadows, Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and Hersey were all shut out while Arlington and Hoffman Estates dropped overtime thrillers.

Jerry Norys and Paul Cornwell put the Vikes over the top after regulation play produced a 1-1 tie and neither side was able to further dent the scoreboard through four sudden-death overtime sessions.

The two teams then alternately fired five penalty kicks. Lalo Rodriguez of the Bronchos was the only player able to get one past goalie Eric Hartman while Norys and Cornwell were scoring for hosting Fremd.

BARRINGTON HAD broke open a scoreless tie in the third period but Fremd answered back in the fourth session on Rick Garcia's surprise goal, assisted by Jon Seeley. Viking Steve Norys sprained an ankle in the first quarter and was sidelined the rest of the game.

Prospect picked up a token goal in the fourth period on Santiago Bustamante's penalty shot after Forest View had already forged a 4-0 lead.

The score was close through midgame. Tom Stiff tallied for the Falcons in the first period, assisted by Tom Sroka but Forest View didn't hit the scoring column again until period three when George Brousalis struck paydirt aided by Bob Ladendorf.

For insurance John Hegel added a Falcon goal assisted by Wolfgang Klein and the two reversed roles to apply the clincher. Kelly O'Brien, Matt Clark and Jim Avolio all worked in the Falcon net, combining for six saves. Busy Knight goalie Norbert Raddatz in a stellar losing effort brushed aside 21 attempts.

Dan Boutellier's hat trick and Tim Wellman's inspired over-all play sparked the Grenadier win over the visiting Eagles. Tony Kees also had a goal and an assist for Elk Grove while Ron Sanders in the Gren goal was credited with 20 saves.

ELK GROVE built up a 4-1 lead before Leyden dumped in a last-second goal. Wellman, in addition to outstanding general play also chipped in with an assist.

Stevenson upped their over-all record for the season to 4-4 on goals by Neil Kaiser, Jorge Gallegos and Jim Woodke. Ross Pierson, minding the Patriot nets, had 10 saves.

Arlington dropped a 3-2 cliffhanger to York in the sixth overtime stanza. York drew first blood, in the initial period but the Redbirds knotted it right back up two minutes later on Brian Wachlin's shot, assisted by Paul Wei.

There was no further scoring through the remainder of regulation action or four extra five minutes sudden-death stints. Penalty kicks came next and each side added a point, Ted Nicholson scoring for the hosting Cardinals.

NEXT CAME sudden death penalty kicks. York's Sergio Attendondo finally slipped one past goalie Rick Bakas, who was otherwise cited by his coach for turning in a fantastic performance against an exceptionally strong team.

Hoffman Estates also lost 3-2, to Addison Trail. The Blazers originally opened a 2-0 gap but Frank Mueller put the Hawks back in business with a pair of third period goals. After two overtime stanzas and a five-penalty kick period, the verdict was finally decided in a second penalty kick session.

Buffalo Grove ended its season at Lake Forest Academy, dropping a 2-0 decision. Bison goalie Tim Hill had 21 saves in a losing cause.

Wheeling lost a 1-0 tearjerker to Waukegan East, the hosting Bulldogs slipping home a goal two minutes into the contest and Wildcat goaltender Ron Walsh subsequently halting 16 more shots on goal including a usually deadly eight footer.

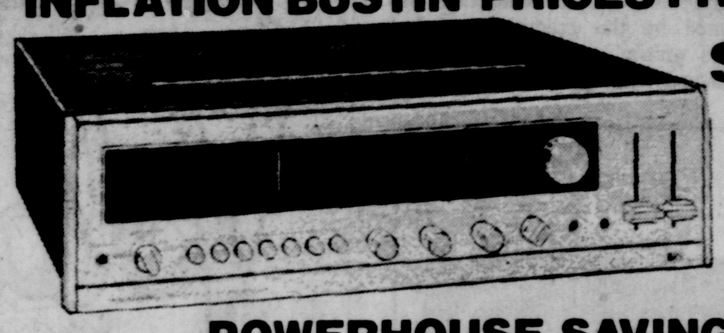

HERSEY AND Rolling Meadows both were put out of business by 5-0 counts, the Huskies succumbing to Glenbrook North while the Mustangs were bowing out at West Leyden.

Fremd will now entertain Waukegan East Saturday at 2 p.m. while Forest View plays host to Addison Trail at 7 p.m. Saturday evening.

Elk Grove will be at Willowbrook Saturday morning at 9:30 a.m. Stevenson also plays Saturday, at New Trier West.

Results of Lake Park-St. Viator and Niles North-Maine West subsectional contests were not reported to The Herald Thursday night.

Buffalo Grove and Prospect will join with nearly 40 other teams aiming at the throne about to be vacated by Rockford Guilford at the Illinois High School Assn. state golf championship tournament today and Saturday.

The Bison and Knights, along with Palatine's Nick Zambole and Forest View's Joe Carcerano are among a select few prep golfers in the state to advance through district and sectional competition to reach this ultimate level of combat.

They will play a total of 36 holes Friday and Saturday at the University of Illinois Savoy layout, dividing their time equally between a par 72 Orange Course and a par 73 Blue Course.

GUILFORD FIRED a collective total of 638 to edge out Belleville West by two strokes last year and win the Class AA title but the Rockford area has eliminated interscholastic sports programs at their schools this year so a new champion must be found.

Coach Fred Van Iten's Bison and coach George Bork's Knights are both ranked among the top contenders, emerging from the potent Barrington district last week along with Lake Forest, Waukegan East and New Trier West. Other teams to watch are Naperville North, Joliet West and Homewood-Flossmoor.

The Grove team consists of Mike Marshall, Dan Krolack, Al Sloat, Rich Peterson, Bob Hoffman and Doug Warman. Representing Prospect are Scott Spielmann, Mike Dee, Dave Fatina, Paul Moats, Steve Kurka and Bob Lopotko.

ZAMBOLE, MEDALIST at the Mid-Suburban conference meet, also advanced from Barrington. He and Carcerano, the only local qualifier from a Falcon-hosted sectional, will join with the rest of the field including 22 other unattached medalist performers in shooting for the individual title also vacated by the graduation of last year's winner — Dave Ogrin of the Waukegan Bulldogs.

Stevenson 3rd in swim invite

Stevenson High School girls took a third recently in the six-team Lake Forest Invitational swimming meet, which was won by Lake Forest.

Stevenson has concluded its finest girls swimming season ever with a lopsided 124-47 win over Crown. The Patriots finished with a 5-3 record in girls swimming, the best yet.

In the Lake Forest Invite, Carol Hermann took second in the 500-yard freestyle with a 6:26.717 clocking. Jaquie Yongs took second in the breaststroke with a 1:20.454. The Pats' free relay team took third place with a time of 4:29.799.

Playoff spot is wrapped up

Elk Grove in unusual situation

WHO GETS THIS trophy will depend on who wins the Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates football game Saturday on the Hoffman Hawks' field. Hawk coach Bill Gourley (left) and Schaumburg head man Bob Ferguson (right) get the feel of the hardware, being offered for the first time by the Schaumburg State Bank and vice-chairman Ward Weaver (center). It will be a traveling trophy.

by BOB GALLAS

Elk Grove head football coach Don Schnake is a little confused.

Schnake, the dean of coaches in the Mid-Suburban League South, is in a position that's new to him. His Grenadiers have wrapped up the division title and will take part in the state playoffs next month.

The trouble is, Elk Grove has two more games to play before then.

"WE'VE NEVER BEEN in this situation before," said Schnake, whose 6-1 Grens host Conant (3-4) tonight. "I don't think we'll be doing much different, though."

That's typical of a Schnake-styled football team, which is usually noted for a machine-like approach to its games. Practices this week have been hard — and long, as usual. The Grens don't plan on letting up.

"We're not going to be careful," said Schnake. "I may be wrong, but football isn't a careful game," he said. "It's important to keep the winning habit."

Schnake is a little worried about the Grens being a little flat, as they were in the first quarter of Saturday's game against Hoffman. Hoffman took advantage and the score was tied 7-7 at the half. But the Grens opened up in the second half to win easily, 34-13.

South

And by no means is he taking Conant at its very deceiving 3-4 record, which includes a heartbreaking one-point loss in double overtime last week to Forest View.

"THEY CAN BEAT US if they come to play ball," said Schnake. "Their quarterback (Scott Schafer) is a game breaker. He can scramble and is a good runner and thrower. They also have a pair of good running backs in (Jeff) Johnson and (Tony) Stompanato." A win for Conant, 2-3 in the South, would give the Cougars a share of third place.

In other action in the MSL South this weekend, Forest View entertains Waukegan East tonight in a non-conference tilt. Prospect is also in action tonight, at Rolling Meadows.

Saturday, Schaumburg travels to Hoffman Estates to meet the Hawks.

The Prospect-Rolling Meadows clash will also be a battle for third place in the South, behind Elk Grove and second-place Forest View. Both clubs sport 2-3 league marks going into tonight's final conference game.

"SATURDAY'S SCHAUMBURG-HOFFMAN tussle will also be important in the standings. Schaumburg, 2-3, is the fourth team in the division to have a shot at taking at least a share of third place with a win. A loss to Hoffman would put Schaumburg in a tie for last in the MSL South, something the division defending champions would like to avoid at any costs.

Because the engine oil gradually becomes clogged with combustion by-products, it must be changed — that is, drained and replaced — at the intervals prescribed in your owner's manual. The oil filter needs changing periodically, as well. Check the engine oil each time the gas tank is filled. Add a quart of oil only if the level is on or below the add mark. If the level is between the full and add lines, do not add any oil, rather wait until you fill your gas tank again and determine then if you need to add oil.

Fans' forum

Dear Editor:

Your sportswriter, Bob Frisk, did a good human interest story on Slippery Rock State College in today's (Oct. 22) paper, but failed to mention the real reason for the school's national popularity.

In the early days of "football cards," where you had to pick all 10 games or whatever, the professional gamblers who sold them were always alert to include games between little-known colleges. Confronted with a decision as to who would win such a game, the person making the bet could only guess or toss a coin, thereby increasing his chances of not winning.

LAKE COUNTY BLUES

Editor:

It was hard to believe that your paper finally printed an article about Stevenson High school sports. It amazes me that your Buffalo Grove paper always contains Buffalo Grove High School everything and yet because we live in (the) Lake County (part of) Buffalo Grove we must subscribe to the Independent Register and the Libertyville and Vernon Town Crier to get the school news that our Buffalo Grove kids attend (yes, Stevenson High School).

Think about it. Is only the school board news of interest to people or don't you think the Lake County Buffalo Grove people care about their children in sports? And yes, the Wonderful Marching Patriot Band who represented our state and our community in Philadelphia and Washington, D.C. on July 3-4 this past summer?

Keep up the good work. Maybe sometime soon we'll see an article on the band and, who knows, maybe the other sports will get at least one write-up a season.

ORR CARRIER

Fans forum:

It should be plenty evident to Black Hawk fans already in this young hockey season that the newly acquired Bobby Orr is what makes the difference between a mediocre team destined for the middle of the NHL standings and a super team that could threaten for the Stanley Cup. Orr, even at 28 and on bad legs, can skate circles around the rest of the league. He will make the season an exciting and successful one — if he stays healthy.

Lions journey to Aurora East

The St. Viator Lions, who have clinched a spot in the state football playoffs and can do no worse than tie for the conference title in the East Suburban Catholic Conference, travel to Aurora East tonight where they'll tangle with the Tomcats in an 8 p.m. contest.

The Lions, 6-1 overall and 5-0 in the ESCC, won their fifth straight Sunday with a 27-0 whitewashing of St. Joseph's. In doing so, the Lions clinched at least a tie for the ESCC title and a spot in the playoffs.

The Tomcats will be coming off a 28-16 loss to Elgin last week and are 5-2 overall this season. The other Tomcats' loss this year came at the hands of Rockford Boylan.

West in Skokie

The Maine West Warriors will try to get back on the winning track in football tonight when they travel to meet the winless Niles East Trojans in Skokie.

The Warriors lost a close 7-6 decision last weekend to Glenbrook South and now are 1-6 on the season.

Niles East, predominately a junior-laden squad, have dropped all seven of their decisions so far this season and will be pressed by a Warriors defense that has been outstanding of late.

But West's offense, which hasn't been too potent this season, will have to put it together so quarterback Bob Zuccarini will have some room to operate.

Saxons plan awards night

The Fall Sports Awards Banquet of Schaumburg High School, will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 10, at 7:00 p.m. in the school cafeteria at 1100 Schaumburg Road.

Football, cross country, and golf will be the sports honored. This year, instead of the usual Pot Luck affair, dinner will be catered and the cost is $4.25 each. The evening will be sponsored by the V.I.P. Club (Very Interested Parents) of Schaumburg High School.

Zikes places 20th

Les Zikes, a bowling professional from Palatine, recently finished 20th in the Battle Creek (Mich.) tournament won by Earl Anthony.

Zikes, who manages Beverly Lanes in Arlington Heights, cashed a check for $800.

From campuses nationwide

—Despite an 0-7 record for the University of Dubuque, wide receiver Rod Kiolbassa is still one of the leading pass catchers in the Iowa Conference.

Kiolbassa, a junior from Mount Prospect, led the conference by more than 20 receptions last year but because UD finished 4-5-1 he did not make the first team all-conference list.

—Chuck Stevens of Des Plaines, now attending Michigan Tech, is the leading candidate for the goalie slot on the hockey team. In a recent game with Duluth he turned away 20 shots and also saved 20 in an intrasquad game.

—Jack Stanko, a graduate of Forest View High School, and John Batke, who prepped at Palatine High School, are playing for the Elmhurst College football team.

Stanko is a linebacker majoring in Pre-Med, Batke a defensive back majoring in Business Administration and Mathematics.

—Senior safety Jim Stauner, former Palatine High School star, had a busy day in the University of Illinois' 31-23 loss to Michigan State last Saturday.

Stauner had one solo tackle, six assists, made one tackle for a loss, broke up a pass and dropped a Spartan runner to save a touchdown.

—Andy Knotek, a graduate of Palatine High School, is the third leading pass receiver and second leading scorer for the Millikin University football team.

In five games he has caught 11 passes for 131 yards and two touchdowns.

His two touchdown catches are the most on the team and his 12 points ties him with two other Millikin gridders.

—Roberta Sievert, a 1975 graduate of Forest View High School and a freshman special education major at Northern Illinois University, has been selected to the NIU women's gymnastics team which opens its season Dec. 11 at Kishwaukee College.

—Forest View High School graduate Dave Matzl is a starting defensive end for Ball State University's 5-2 Cardinals.

Matzl has been credited with 16 solo tackles, 24 assists and three tackles for a loss.

—Former Arlington star Rick Purcell has maintained that status as a freshman at Illinois Wesleyan where he was voted Lineman of the Week for his effort against Washington State.

Harper golfers shoot for berth in national finals

Lincolnland and Lake County appear to be the golf teams to beat as Harper hooks up with the state's best junior college teams Friday and Saturday in Springfield, aiming at a berth in the national finals.

A dozen schools will converge at the Rail golf course in Springfield for the Region IV tourney this weekend. Only the top single team will advance, along with the best four individual performers, out of the two-day, 36-hole meet.

Harper outdistanced both Lake County and Lincolnland in a tournament at Joliet earlier in the campaign but since then has been bettered by the Lancers in their own invitational meet and a tourney at DuPage.

Coach Roger Bechtold's Hawk outfit is headed up by veterans Dave Nelson, Mike Fitton and Jim Arden along with Rick Groessl and Steve Spielmann. They will be entering the meet fresh from capturing the N4C league championship.

Touch football

MOUNT PROSPECT MEN'S LEAGUE
RED DIVISION
Wombats 26, Rootee Kazooter 0

Jeff Smith intercepted the first pass of the game and the Licht Paint-Power Motors Wombats were off and running as they swamped the Rootee Kazooter 26-0 and erased the sour taste of their only defeat.

Smith darted in front of Kazooter receiver Ernest Tait and snatch the pass thrown by Gino Ciopprolanghia to begin the rout that improved the Wombat's league leading record to 5-1.

The Wombat defense, nicknamed "The Rout Patrol," intercepted the harried Kazooter QB three times as they consistently gave the offense fine field position.

Quarterback Brian Reed, behind the pass blocking of Raoul "Zip Code" Gonzalez, hit Smith thrice for touchdown passes and tossed to Al Ernst for another.

It was Reed's finest day as a Wombat, clicking on 17 of 23 passes for 214 yards and running the offense with unusual aplomb.

say, "We're aware of them, but we're not concerned with them. We're going to play our game and if the statistics come out in our favor, fine."

The Viking coach feels that his club is ready for the game. "It's a big one, but we've had them every week. Our success, I think, has been gradual, almost like a snowball effect."

HE ADDED: "We're practicing the same way, not doing anything really different. But we're gaining confidence, eliminating mistakes and improving ourselves. Our attitude is great and physically, except for a couple of colds, we're in fine shape."

Gliwa offered a similar opinion of his charges: "Our morale is excellent and everybody is healthy. We are sharpening our tools and we will be ready."

The Hersey mentor went on to say, "You couldn't give me a possibility that I'm not aware of. All we know is that a Hersey win will end everybody else's season and we plan to do that."

HERSEY AND Fremd played to a scoreless tie in their inaugural meeting back in 1969. The following year Fremd nipped Hersey 15-14 but for the past five seasons, the Huskies have dominated the series.

Noted Gliwa of the '76 showdown: Physically, Fremd will have the edge but in our favor is the fact that the game will be on our field and that we are the defending champs."

Last week Hersey just barely squeaked by Palatine, but Gliwa had some comments about this too. "We gave them beautiful field position and all they got was two points. And their defense did that. We shut out their offense, which Fremd didn't. We shut out Arlington, which Fremd didn't. And we beat Buffalo Grove, which Fremd didn't. We have to feel confident."

Buffalo Grove's important game with the Cardinals gets underway at about 2 p.m. Saturday.

In another North Division encounter Friday, the Pirates will be at Wheeling with an 8 p.m. start.

Palatine is coming off its impressive effort against Hersey, and Wheeling moved the ball well early against Buffalo Grove before succumbing to the Bison ground attack.

LEGAL NOTICE

Cook County Preamble

Cook County DELINQUENT TAX LIST

OFFICE OF COUNTY TREASURER OF COOK COUNTY AND EX-OFFICIO COUNTY COLLECTOR OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS

Advertisement and Notice of Collector of Cook County of Application for Judgment against Delinquent Lands and Lots for General Taxes for the year 1975, for delinquent back tax items, for Order of Sales Thereof, and Notice of Sale Thereof, and application for judgment fixing the correct amount of any tax paid under protest, as provided by law.

October 29, 1976

NOTICE IS hereby given that the said Collector of Cook County will apply to the County Division of Circuit Court of Cook County on the 8th day of November, A.D. 1976, for judgment against lands and lots hereinafter described as being delinquent upon which taxes remain due and unpaid, or personal property taxes charged thereon, as noted in this advertisement, remain due and unpaid, for said taxes, interest and costs and for an order to sell said lands and lots for the satisfaction thereof according to law (excepting from said judgment and order of sales the cases which are included in this advertisement for sale only under former unexecuted judgments and orders for sale as may be noted in this advertisement.)

Notice is also given that an application will be made for judgment fixing the correct amount of any tax paid under protest.

Notice is further herein and hereby given that on the first Monday next succeeding the 8th day of Nov. A.D. 1976, to wit, the 15th day of Nov. A.D. 1976, at the hour of 8 o'clock A.M. all said lands and lots hereinafter described for sale of which an order shall be made, or has been made and not executed as noted, will be exposed to public sale at the County Building of Cook County, where the seat of County government is located in said County, for the amount of taxes, interest and costs due thereon respectively.

The following is a list of delinquent lands and lots upon which the taxes remain due and unpaid, the name of the owners, where known, the total amount due thereon (excluding delinquent special assessments separately advertised) and the year or years for which the same is due.

(The total amount due in this application on each tract or parcel of land or lots is the sum of the amounts appearing due in this advertisement.)

EXPLANATORY NOTE:- In this list in all places where no other notation is made the figures in the column headed "$" (meaning dollars) and the "cts" (meaning cents) represent the taxes due and unpaid for the year A.D. 1975. Where the letter "F" is placed to the left of the figures in this column it is intended for an abbreviation of the word "forfeiture," and denotes that the amounts due and unpaid on said lands and lots have been previously forfeited to the State. When back taxes are extended they are indicated by the last segment of the property index number identified by the unit. This unit will be identified by a number 7000 or greater.

Payment of taxes made after printer's copies are sent to publishers for listing, and appearing as delinquent in this advertisement, will be satisfied in judgment records before sale.

In lieu of legal description used heretofore each parcel of land or lot is designated by a permanent real estate index number.

In the permanent real estate index number system, appearing in the column headed "A," the subarea by the number in the column headed "SA," the block by the number appearing in the column headed "Blk," and the particular parcel by the number in the column headed "Pcl."

Comparison of the permanent real estate index number with the legal description of any parcel may be made by referring to the cross indices maintained in County offices.

Published by order of County Collector of Cook County, Illinois.

Candidates react differently

Campaign's final days spark action by hopefuls

by STEVE BROWN
A news analysis

The stump speeches have given way to hand wringing, and as the candidates look down the edge of the calendar to see election day staring them in the face, they react to the dilemma in different ways.

President Ford and Democrat Jimmy Carter are racing around the country and probably will stop back in Illinois again before next Tuesday.

Republican gubernatorial candidate James R. Thompson is trying to keep supporters from becoming complacent. Democrat Michael J. Howlett is growling more at reporters and wishing publicly that some of his campaign appearances would be canceled.

On a local basis, congressional candidates are raising phony issues, apparently in hopes of getting some last-minute publicity.

Meanwhile, candidates for the Illinois House are beginning to look out for number one and are asking for "bullet votes" for themselves.

The Ford-Carter double-barrel appearances in the suburbs Tuesday offered some basis for comparison.

They both appear to be trying to get good crowds, give a boost to local candidates and stay out of trouble.

The fact both men spent the better part of a day in Illinois just a week before the election does more to confirm the closeness of the race and the priority nature of Illinois' 26 electoral votes than any speculation.

The weather on election day or a last minute gaffe by one of the candidates could be the final determining factor in the outcome of the presidential election.

Both Thompson and Howlett confirmed in separate interviews with The Herald that they are trying to touch as many bases as possible. Thompson admits he is keeping up a hectic schedule to keep volunteers from letting down.

He realizes that despite the polls, the voters still must go to the polls, which is something Democrats in Illinois have proven more successful at than Republicans.

Howlett appears to be tiring of the grueling pace of the campaign. A weekend observation of his campaign saw the candidate somewhat short tempered. At one point he sounded disappointed when he learned two downstate airports were not fogged in and he could make his scheduled campaign appearances.

Closer to home, Republican congressional candidate Samuel H. Young of Glenview is trying to get someone to believe his contention that busing is an issue in his race with U. S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th. Young raised the issue several months ago and got a puzzled reaction both from the press and other politicians.

He has used the claim on campaign literature, but has not raised it at every appearance. It seems the public does not agree with the candidate on this one.

In the 12th Congressional District, Democrat Edwin L. Frank of Hoffman Estates is issuing statements criticizing U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, for claiming to have the endorsement of a national senior citizens group.

Crane received such an endorsement, but the group has tended to favor conservatives congressmen who have voted against programs for senior citizens.

The problem is more one of putting too much stock in the endorsement of special interest groups.

The other side of the coin is that Frank has been holding the information for about three weeks and when asked why he held it, Frank said, "because we weren't ready to release it."

Over-all, there are signs that campaigns at all levels are starting to degenerate. This is the time for campaign officials to begin whispering generally baseless charges about their opponents.

Others are beginning to forget about the need for teamwork and are looking out for themselves. This is especially true in the races for the Illinois House where voters must pick three representatives for each district and have the opportunity to cast three votes for a single candidate, called the bullet vote.

This has caused candidates such as William Sarto, an Elgin Democrat, in to print literature telling voters how to cast a bullet vote.

Joan Brennan of Elk Grove Village also has begun distributing literature instructing voters on how to cast a bullet vote for her.

In both cases the candidates are running a campaign against incumbent Democratic state representatives in districts that historically elect only one Democratic state representative.

Totally below the belt campaign tactics have not been detected yet, but those are the kinds of tricks that develop in the closing hours of the campaign, timed to give the victim the least amount of time to react.

Heated battles missing from campaign

Carey-Egan race abrupt change from '72 contest

by WANDALYN RICE
A news analysis

In 1972, while Richard M. Nixon was sweeping to a second presidential term, Cook County voters were being treated to a bitterly fought election for the office of state's attorney.

The contest, between Democratic State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and his Republican opponent Bernard Carey, left lasting scars in the Democratic party because of the break between Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and U.S. Rep. Ralph Metcalfe, D-1st, a black leader from Chicago's South Side.

As a result of the split, Carey became one of the few Republicans in Cook County history to cut into the traditional Democratic strength in the city's black neighborhoods.

THIS YEAR, Carey is running for reelection against Edward Egan, a respected former appellate court judge hand-picked by Dalty to return the state's attorney's office to the Democratic fold.

The contrast between the Carey-Egan race and the 1972 campaign is noticeable. While the two candidates this year have traded pointed barbs in occasional joint appearances, their contest has not generated the same kind of heat as did the Hanrahan-Carey race, in which Hanrahan at one point criticized Carey's wife.

There are other differences between 1976 and 1972. Carey, running as the incumbent rather than as an outsider promising reform, has found himself answering many of the same charges about excessive plea bargaining and low conviction rates that he used against Hanrahan.

Also, because Carey has failed to fulfill the expectations of many liberal independents by not prosecuting Daley Democrats in large numbers, Carey has seen an erosion of some of his independent Democratic support.

AT THE SAME TIME, however, Egan has proven to be a less than dynamic campaigner who, when the campaign began, was able to put even the Daley organization precinct captains to sleep with his attacks nn Carey.

Egan has improved his campaign style in recent weeks but has yet to attract much media attention to counteract Carey's better name recognition.

One measure of how low-key Egan's campaign is, is that when he is speaking before non-partisan crowds, he frequently uses the line, "My name is Edward Egan, not Edward Hanrahan," to counteract Carey, who has been contrasting his own record to Hanrahan's.

The focus of Egan's campaign has been his record as first assistant state's attorney under Dan Ward, the present chief justice of the Illinois Supreme Court who was the last highly touted candidate Daley used to wrest the state's attorney's office from GOP control.

EGAN'S CONSTANT reference to his work with Ward has prompted a Carey counterattack that Egan "wants to take the state's attorney's office back to the 1960s." Carey has even, in face-to-face meetings with Egan, suggested that Egan "hasn't had a new idea since television was invented."

Recent polls and the opinions of veteran political observers indicate the Egan-Carey race will be close. Egan will rely on the Democratic precinct captains in Chicago and Carey will count on a big suburban Republican turn-out and on holding some of his 1972 inroads into black neighborhoods because he again has been endorsed by Metcalfe.

The importance of the race to Daley, and the weakness of the party's state ticket headed by Michael J. Howlett, are indicated by marching orders issued this week to Daley's troops which emphasize the Egan race.

What the state's attorney's race may come down to election night will be another test of whether the Daley organization still can dominate Cook County elections as it has in the past when credible Republian candidates run.

History indicates Daley and Egan will celebrate a victory election night. If they do not, it may signal a new and interesting era in county politics.

Nuclear waste policy forum open

by LEA TONKIN

The environment

While scientists and bureaucrats disagree about the storing of radioactive wastes in salt mines, seabeds and outer space, more nuclear wastes are generated every day.

At the Conference on Public Policy Issues in Nuclear Waste Management, continuing through today at the Ramada O'Hare Inn, Des Plaines, the public is invited to participate in discussions affecting national public policy on this long-range problem.

Conference sponsors include the Federal Energy Research and Development Administration, Nuclear Regulatory Commission, National Science Foundation, Council on Environmental Quality, and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The conference is a forum for discussion of environmental, social, legal and other issues relating to nuclear waste management.

AS OUTLINED by John Busterud, acting chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality, informed nuclear energy students have an obligation to protect future generations from "nuclear boobytraps." Noting that plutonium has a half-life of some 24,000 years, he said, "We not only have nuclear wastes, but we are generating more every day."

Conference chairman Alan Campbell said scientists disagree about the best means of safely storing potentially lethal wastes from nuclear plants. And government decisions on this issue "are in no way neutral in terms of their impact on society," he said.

Campbell said open discussion of scientific facts as well as social and other issues related to nuclear waste management is a step toward increased public confidence in government. He serves as dean of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University.

SALT, CRYSTALLINE rock and other geological formations have been found suitable as "repositories" for nuclear wastes, said Carl Kuhlman, of the energy administration's Division of Nuclear Fuel Cycles and Production. The first two sites are planned for 1985 operations.

A repository, as described by Kuhlman, would consist of a large number of rooms excavated beneath the earth's surface. Receiving and handling facilities would be included in "surface facilities" covering about 100 acres. The excavation for a full-scale storage area might occupy a land area with a radius of about one mile. Land use would be controled within a radius of some four miles. "We expect intense local interest in the program," he said.

RICHARD MATTAS, a nuclear scientist at Argonne National Laboratory, will discuss the potential of fusion energy Thursday at a public meeting sponsored by the Pollution & Environmental Problems organization. The session begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Palatine Public Library, 500 N. Benton.

"Fusion offers a virtually unlimited supply of power," said Mattas. "However, its development is in a very early stage. Many problems remain to be solved."
